"Relate to us a wondrous story

"For the night is long," said Dunyazad, "and passeth slowly indeed." "Most willingly shall I tell such a story, O my sister," answered Shaherazad, "if this virtuous-King permit me." And Shahriyar, hearing these words and being also restless, was pleased with the idea of listening to the tale; and thus did Shaherazad begin her nightly recitation which lasted even until one thousand nights and a night had rolled past.

"It has been related to me, O happy King," she began, "that there was once in a magnificent and wealthy city, a certain house wherein was stored a vast and marvelous treasure. Nor was this treasure under lock and key, but open, where everyone might use it and partake thereof. Yea, verily was this treasure extensive and like unto the whole world and all the knowledge therein in its scope and infinite variety. And its custodians bestowed freely upon whosoever entered the halls with a willing and open mind. And he that partook of the treasure found himself not only the richer, but in the possession of a new power which, if used rightly, brought him wisdom . . . " to beguile our waking hours . . .

Like the fabulous treasure house of Shaherazad's tale, high school life offers limitless riches and opportunities to the student who crosses its threshold. Here the myriad facets of the worlds of literature, science, and the arts open before him; here he meets people of every background and walk of life and works together with them in harmony and fellowship. They form the cornerstone for all his life to come. Here he is confronted with many fresh challenges to surmount, with trials as taxing in their way as the labors of a Sinbad or Allah-ed-din. Many of the friendships he makes here will last throughout his life, enriching it and serving ever as a source of joy. Even as a thousand nights and a night passed without the luster of Shaherazad's narrative growing dull, the passage of years here brings to the student the thousand little experiences of day-to-day life, the blunders as well as the triumphs, the thousand memories both good and bad that crowd his widening experience; and all of these, like the individual pieces of stone in a mosaic, form rich and variagated whole, a brilliant and colorful pageant. It is our hope to beguile you, even as did Shaherazad in the ancient tale, by revealing the treasure in our house, by relating to you the different aspects of our life here, the tale, which for those who figured in them, were far richer and more exciting than any Oriental narrative. Follow us then along our course and pause again to remember the Walnut Hills that figured so important in the lives of its students.

ABOVE: Our school, viewed from beyond Victory Parkway, is an impressive sight, "high on the hill."

RIGHT: The Circle steps are the hub of after school gatherings, as students congregate with friends.

WALNUT HILLS, tale comparable to Shaherazad's one of ancient times, follows a pattern from day to day in its activities, yet brings new, rich experiences even as the same events repeat . . . . . page 8

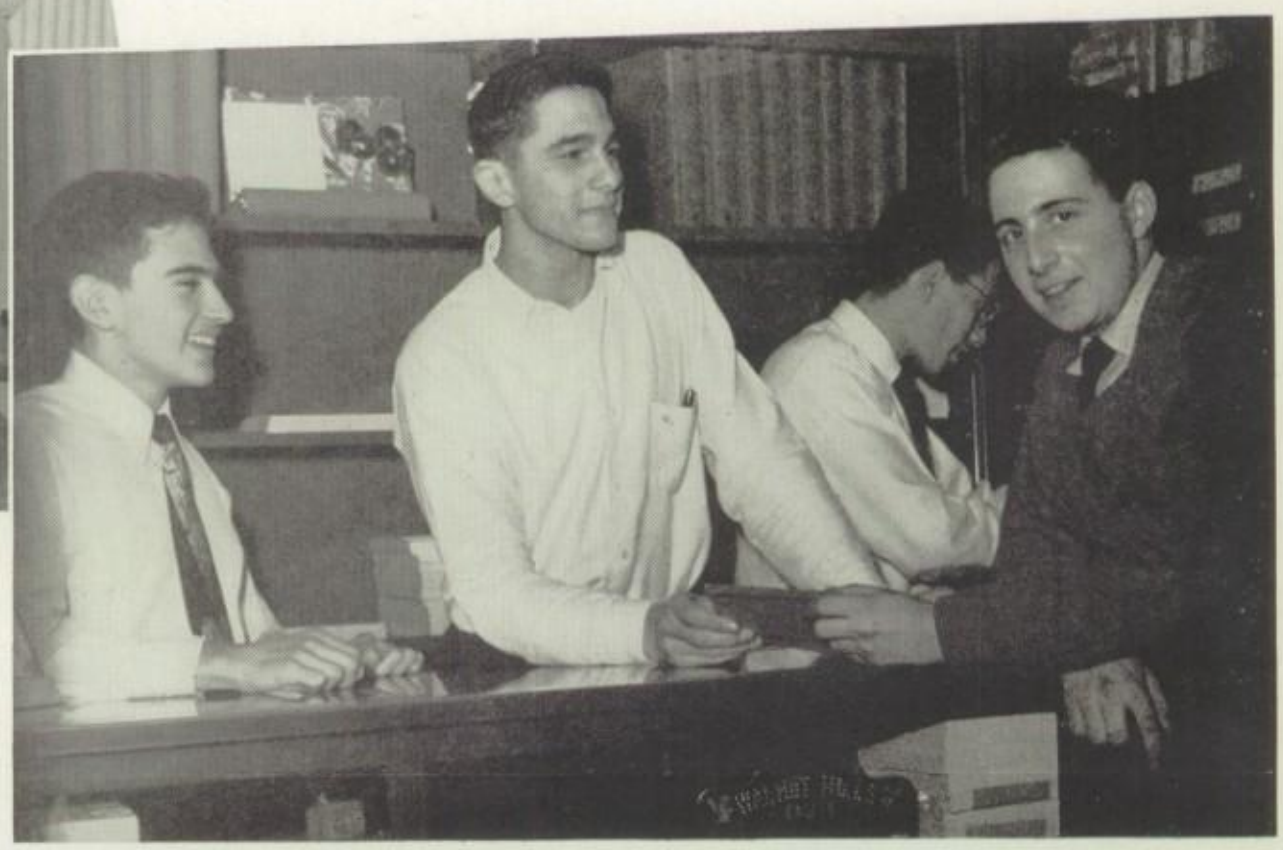
A tale whose chapters are many . . .

The morning of a new day is as the beginning of a tale, the opening of a door, or the unfolding of a flower. The errands are done; the bustle is over; slowly we find our places in our home rooms; maybe there's still some homework to finish; we've glanced through the Chatterbox with one ear cocked to the P. A.; we've done our duty in the class election; we've enjoyed another guidance period—and now we settle down to business, only occasionally interrupted by a messenger with the absence list or a mysterious summons. Now we open the book, the tale of history and intrigue, through many tongues; we pass through the door of discovery in science; we pluck the flower of beauty in art and music.

The gates parted upon the command

ABOVE: Effies, upon coming to Walnut Hills for the first time, explore the surroundings of their future "home of opportunities." LEFT: The main hall on Tuesday mornings is especially popular, for Chatterboxes are then distributed. BELOW: The Supply Store is a busy place in the morning, filling the needs of students for equipment.



But as the day wears on, and the impetus of the morning dies away, we grow restless; a certain mumbling undercurrent grows. The privileged few scramble for first lunch, while the clock ticks on and on, as we grumble over the long wait before we go for last lunch. And after our own mad dash to lunch we take in the noon movie, or amble out to the popcorn machine or Luca's van. The main hall is a jumble of students hashing over the latest English or math assignment, and the gossip that just can't wait. Then full of macaroni, monkey-shines out of our systems, thoroughly refreshed by our brief breathing period, we return to our classrooms ready to tackle fresh obstacles along our afternoon course.

"Open Sesame"; they entered in

ABOVE: Throughout the day, the main office, guided by Miss Shigley, watches over the school, and helps everyone with his problems. RIGHT: After the mad dash for the school buses, the students leave school more leisurely, and linger a few moments on the Circle steps before going home.

They pursued their quest, and behold,

School's out! The three o'-clock bell rings. There is the thunder of feet, the chatter of voices: "Got a ride?" and the clatter of lockers. Students stream out of the school. The school buses are loaded with squirming effies. Certain envied juniors and seniors roar off in a blaze of glory in their model T's, or in the family car, with a dozen kids riding in layers. Athletes form jostling groups on the way to team room and gym. The teachers and staff file out more sedately after they have stuffed chemistry quizzes and exams in the safe and set the burglar traps—but all of them sing under their breath, "School's out!"

LEFT: After school, the halls reflect the seeming end of the days activities.

the wide world lay before them . . .

The three o'clock bell has sounded, but the school is still alive with bustling activities. Calls sound across the field where athletes run track or play ball. Stage echoes to the rehearsal noises of a play or revue, while strains of music are heard from the band room. Typewriters click in the remote corners of the school where the publication staffs slave. The seniors, the directing and motivating force behind many of these activities, are busy as their year draws to a close. With graduation near, they realize they have gained wisdom and insight from their experiences, even as King Shahriyar realized the value of his experience.

Faculty . . . a tale of guidance for youth "Know," said Shaherazad, "that Shams-ed-din, having great desire to possess himself of wisdom, went before the great sages saying, 'Instruct me, for I am ignorant and would learn.' And the sages bade him sit before them and be instructed. They taught him to revere the wisdom of the past and to uphold justice, and above all ever to be true to that in which he believed. So should he find contentment." Like the sages of old, today's teachers must give youth an insight to the forces which have created our wonderful civilization, and to confirm through this the belief in our American way of life. Today in this world of strife and confusion the teachers' work is even more important than in the past. In their hands rests the hope of the future, the true gate to the paths, not only of knowledge, but of world peace and enduring human dignity. Today as always, the faculty of Walnut Hills is doing a magnificent job of fulfilling the task, for which we the students must pause and give heart-felt thanks.

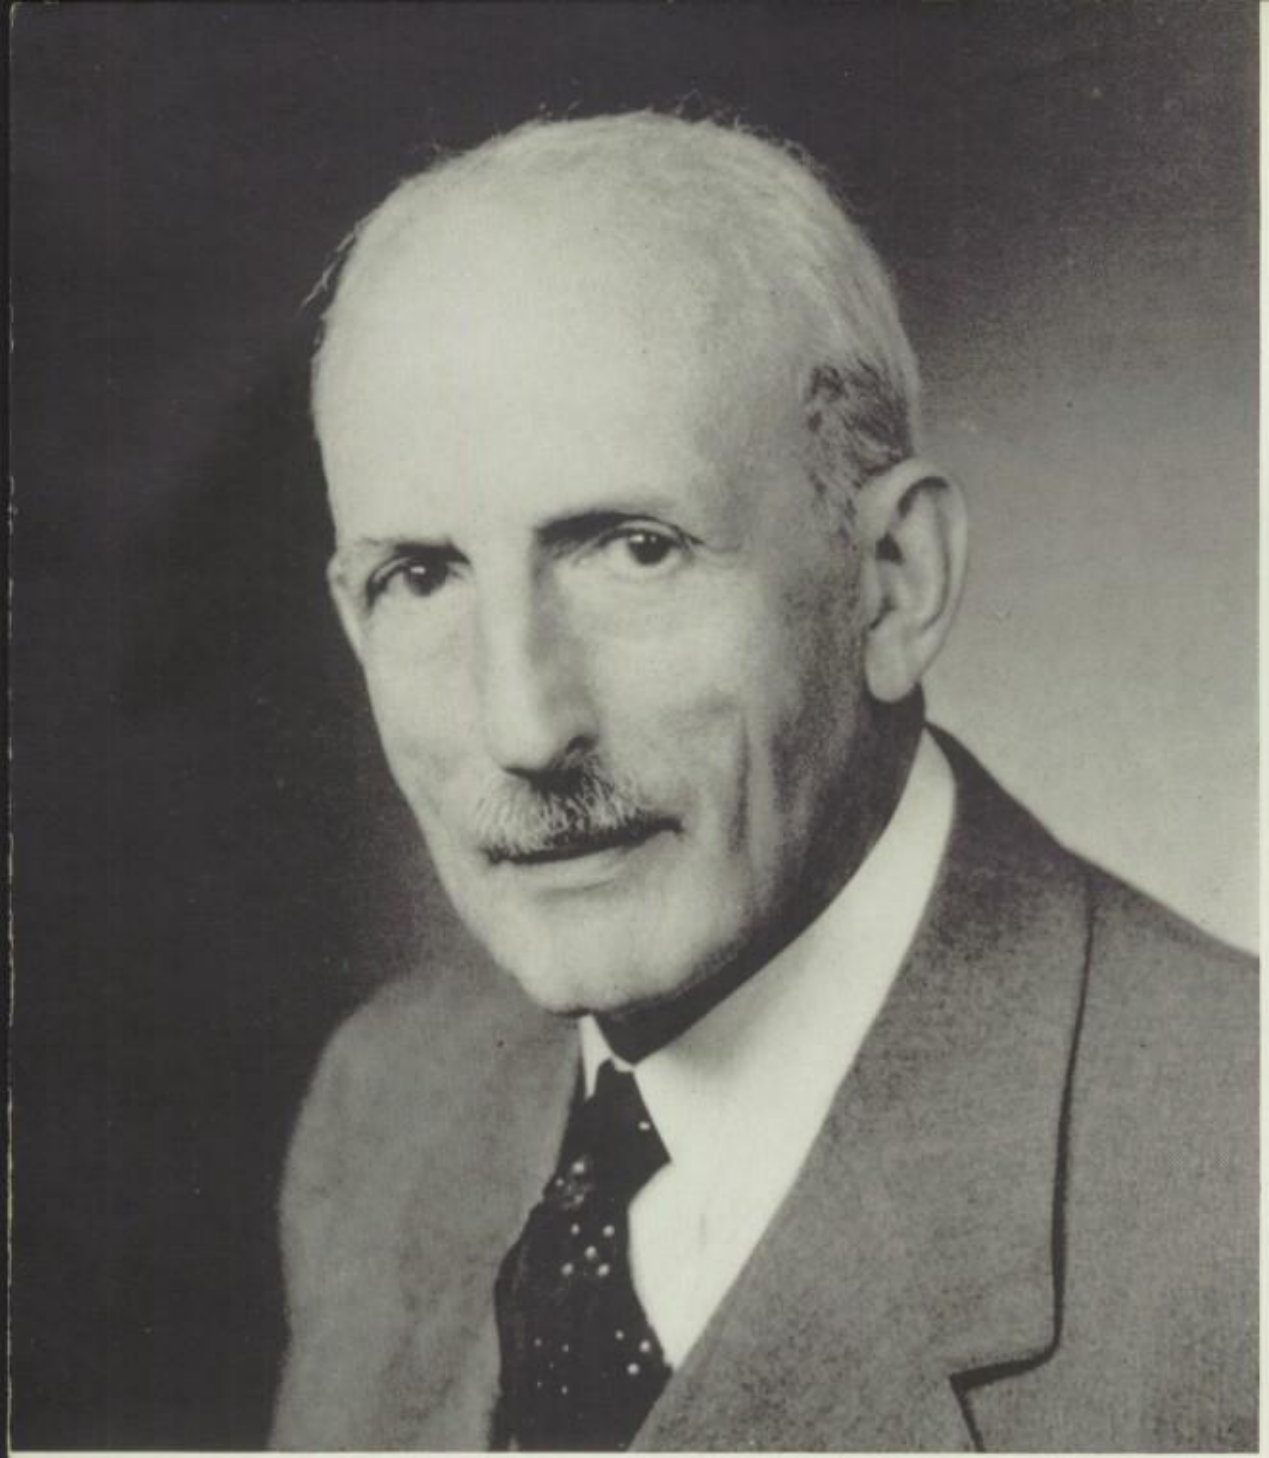
along the pathways of knowledge



Mr. Leonard P. Stewart, Principal.

A wise and learned man leads them

"Good morning, school! Attention now . . . " Another school day, and Mr. Stewart is on the job, handling the reins which operate that complicated machinery called Walnut Hills. Each morning his voice reaches out like a finger to take the pulsebeat of the day's activity, and the students sit back, confident that another day of school life will run smoothly. Mr. Stewart has such great influence over this school because he loves it, because he's so proud of it. Every Walnut Hills success, whether it be a basketball game won, victorious debate team, or contribution to the Community Chest, he feels as deeply as if it were his own personal achievement. It's not just the spectacular which holds his interest, however, but also the routine of the lunchroom, the faculty meetings. His care for these things keeps the school functioning properly. But his pride and sincere interest in us as individuals is what is so wonderful. In each stage of our progress from effies to seniors we feel his interest, his forethought, guiding and helping us. From the moment he helps make us, as effies, feel we're part of Walnut Hills, Mr. Stwart begins to help us towards that moment in our senior year when we receive our acceptance from the college we have chosen. It is the knowledge of his pride and pleasure in us which spurs us on to achieve those ends which he is working to help us attain. But he can never be prouder of us than are we of . . . MR. STEWART.

with sage counsel and assistance

Mr. Henry W. Schroeder, our alert and competent assistant principal, is known to the fellows at Walnut Hills rather as a cheerful friend than a disciplinarian. With a keen eye for the betterment of the school and an open mind for the serious student, Mr. Schroeder fulfills the role of an efficient administrator. He also serves as advisor to the Student Court and manager of the bookroom.

Miss Olive Clarke, besides helping the girls choose the college best suited for them and sponsoring Student Aid, Senior Council, Ushers, and many other activities, finds time to be a true friend, counselling them with her fine sense of humor, her understanding, and the benefit of her wide experience.

Since his arrival here this year, Mr. Bruce McGill has proven himself to be a competent and effective guidance councilor for our boys. Mr. McGill came to our school from Horace Greely High in New York and has shown his ability as advisor to Big Brothers and as a reference source in the home room guidance plan.

The office staff performs the myriad functions necessary to keep the school running smoothly.

Rich and varied are the meanings

English, of all the subjects offered in a high school course, is perhaps the most expansive and varigated. It is the purpose of this course not only to teach the student to organize his thoughts and handle his language forcefully, but also to gain a basic appreciation of the great fund of English literature. For in the study of literature are revealed not only the various authors, and the immortal characters of the great works, but also basic material of that wonderful and vast field of study, the humanities. Thus at Walnut Hills, whose curriculum keeps college work ever in mind, the emphasis on English is prominent. The course is designed to afford a broad sampling of all the various forms of English literature. Each year representative selections of poetry, the novel, the drama, and various new fictional forms are considered, with the study reaching culmination in such works as Hamlet, the poetry of Browning, or the novels of Hardy and Galsworthy, to say nothing of various readings from contemporary dramatic works.

words written and spoken assume . . .

Today, as in times past, man's chief means of communication is the spoken and the written word. Success in business and cultural growth depend on our ability to transmit our own thoughts and ideas and to understand those of others. In seeking to develop this faculty in its students, Walnut Hills offers several courses in speech and journalism. Capable speakers are in constant demand in the classroom, on the stage, in radio, and on the debator's platform. The assurance and poise gained in such public appearances is invaluable. Classes in oral expression prepare us to accept such opportunities as they arise. Newspapers and magazines wield tremendous influence in our modern world in supplying information and shaping public opinion. Those of us who take journalism realize that a free press with full coverage of current events is necessary in a democracy. Factual reporting, concise wording, and technical data required in making an attractive page are studied in this course. School publications put the knowledge thus gained to practical use. Then we more fully realize the practical sides of journalism-deadlines, responsibility, and hard work.

Language is the key to the treasury

It was Cicero who said that all the studies of the humanities have a common bond between themselves. Then Latin and its great literature offer an insight into the vast panorama of classical civilization and its profound influence on the lives of us all. Our stress on this rich, traditional language is one of the features which distinguished us from other high schools. The students are initiated into the mysteries of Latin while still "effies" and "E-flats". The lower school Latin course teaches the basic grammar and vocabulary so necessary for advanced work. Daily drills in "sum-es-est" develop the all important foundation. But in the freshman year begins the real enjoyment of Latin, with the reading of Caesar's exciting narrative of strategy and conquest. The tenth grade course features the biographies of Cornelius Nepos and Cicero's oration for the Manilian Law. The fifth year course continues with Cicero and begins a new experience, reading the Latin poetry of Ovid. Difficult though the work may be at first in the senior course, the early labor was soon repaid. For Virgil's beautiful "Aeneid" proves itself the culmination of the whole six-year course. This comprehensive course will found a background of lasting influence throughout our lives.

of cultures past and present . . .

Practically everyone has a desire to see the nations of the world, but few have the good fortune to make such a trip. At Walnut Hills, however, the language department furnishes us with a magic carpet to carry us, at least mentally, to the strange sights of other civilizations. Walnut Hills offers both beginning and advanced courses in French, German, and Spanish. The study of these languages does more than simply acquaint us with a foreign tongue. A deep insight into the history and customs of the people is gained. The outstanding literature of the country is read. All three languages have active clubs for any student who wishes a more detailed study of the ideals and cultures of the land. In these days of travel and international understanding, French and Spanish play an increasingly big part. Over the conference table and at the opera, foreign tongues predominate. Many pupils discover so great an interest in modern language that they continue to study them even after they leave Walnut Hills. German, of course, is invaluable in the study of medicine. Although we may never actually go to a foreign country, the knowledge and background gained will give us fuller, more interesting personalities, and make us appreciative of the contributions of these cultures to our own.

Search out truth, exercise reason,

The Atomic Age boasts of no Aladdin Lamps and, at least, helicopters are a poor substitute for the convenience of a magic flying carpet; but present day scientists are rapidly approaching the time when they can equal these ancient miracles. In our four years at Walnut Hills we have an opportunity to study natural marvels from the dissection pan to the test tube. Zoology, botany, and biology classes introduce us to the living world, from amoebas and bacteria to man and the redwood tree. Those who take the course in physiology are rewarded by a knowledge of the functions of the parts of living organisms while others, taking the physics course, become acquainted with the science of "matter and motion." One of our well-known science courses is chemistry. Every year the incomparable odor of hydrogen sulfide is wafted gently through the halls as a reminder that inorganic chemistry is still taught at Walnut Hills. However, far more important than the mere absorption of knowledge is the teaching of the scientific process of observing, comparing, and reaching unbiased conclusions. Under the leadership of our capable science instructors, we students are attaining the scientific attitude that will enable us to go out into the world and make it a better place in which to live.

that new marvels may enrich our lives

Here is a tale of challenge and response, the stimulation of logical thinking, a constant striving to overcome the barriers which untrained minds oppose to new concepts; a tale of the freshman probing the idea of the unknown quantity, the sophomore exploring theorem and corollary, or of the upper classman anxiously peering in his log book or pondering some problem in loci. The study of mathematics, in its theoretical aspect, presents to the student the basic principles of logic and balanced organization, and is therefore of the highest importance in the education of everyone. In application mathematics is a dynamic influence in the fields of science and industry. Through its extensive employment many discoveries in medicine, chemistry, electronics, meterology, physics, and astronomy have added to our convenience and wisdom. The Einstein Theory of Relativity is one of the supreme expressions of creative mathematics. At Walnut Hills, algebra and plane geometry are required of us all for graduation. If we wish to continue our studies, two more courses in advanced algebra and trigonometry and solid geometry are offered. Thus, as Walnut Hills graduates, the rewarding time we spend in the study of mathematics is sure to be of a lasting value in our lives.

From the arts draw added perception;

'Extract two essences from the tree of life,' said the sage, 'and your spirits shall be uplifted: understand the beauty of that which is depicted with brush and pen or by the beguiling onrush of melody, and perceive that the origin of all that is of pure beauty is divine.' Here at Walnut Hills we have the faculties to foster a rich appreciation of the arts and to tap the sources of potential talent. The lower school courses in art are exploratory, probing the fundamentals of design, while upper school courses are of a more advanced nature. The art department creates all the scenery and decoration used in the school productions. Besides these activities, Walnut Hills has consistently received honors in both city and national competitions. Both the students and faculty pride themselves on our fine music department. A Cappella Choir gained recognition by its performances at churches and social functions throughout the year and by its appearance with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra at its Christmas Concert. The orchestra performed with consistent excellence at its various concerts, and as accompaniment at Walnut Hills dramatic productions. Through these activities our students find ample vent for their artistic tastes and talents while contributing to the school and community.

and looking backward, gain new insight

This year of 1952 is also the year 1372 and the year 5712. Impossible you say? Not all. It just depends on the calendar you use. In the land of the Arabian Nights, the date is 1372 while by the Jewish system it is 5712. Although differing, these numbers show that man has always been interested in the passage of time and the events which have occurred. This fascinating study is called history, and it forms one of the bases for modern education. We Walnut Hills students gain the all-important background of history and geography in the seventh and eighth grade social studies course. The civilizations with their princes and peasants, ideas and ideals, pass in colorful review before classes devoted to ancient, medieval, and modern history. The required year of American history and government reveals the sacrifices and struggles which went into making this nation one of the world's mightiest. The influence of environment and changing standards in shaping human behavior is taken up in sociology, while economics deals with the complexities of present day commerce and banking. Current events are also followed closely on all grade levels. The lessons taught by history, the story of mankind, may well provide the solution for the global unrest and conflict of today.

Train the body by healthful exercise,

In the days of the Arabian Nights the Bedouin maintained their health and strength by the great physical exertions of outdoor life and by accomplishing their bold and exciting feats. Now conditions for living have greatly changed; organized health and recreation programs are necessary to produce and maintain a strong body. Our physical education programs include apparatus work to develop co-ordination of the body and calisthentics to help build a well-proportioned and muscular physique. Healthful relaxation is also acquired through the supervised games of the gym classes. Participation in athletics fosters the spirit of co-operation among people of various backgrounds. The curriculum of the physical education classes differed in one respect this year, for the swimming classes became elective; in previous years they had been compulsory. Here at Walnut Hills High School the physical education department is designed to inculcate the spirit of fair play, the ability to give and take, so that our graduates may proudly take their places as the future citizens of our country. On playing field and in gym course we should treat others as we would have them treat us. Thus may our gym work train us for living in a world where greater brotherhood is sorely needed.

the hands in skill, so shall we profit

The Arabian Nights pictures its heroines as being pleasing to the eye and clad in beautiful garments. No doubt a knowledge of good grooming and skill with a needle was sought by these Oriental maidens as well as by the girls of today. A required subject for lower school girls, home economics teaches the fundamentals, not only of sewing and cooking, but also of child care, good manners, and an attractive appearance. Better family and personal relationships are also studied. Future homemakers learn about textiles and simple needle work used in making aprons and skirts. The basic steps in selection and preparation of foods form another part of this course. Industrial arts trains seventh and eighth grade boys in various practical crafts. Correct care and handling of hand tools are taught through metal and woodwork. Power tools are utilized safely and efficiently in the shop as the skills of handyman and hobbyist are investigated. The fields of plastics, bookbinding, printing, and electricity are also explored. Mechanical drawing is available to those upper school boys interested in such careers as engineering and architecture. The exactness of detail and precision measurement required in modern industry are stressed in the course.

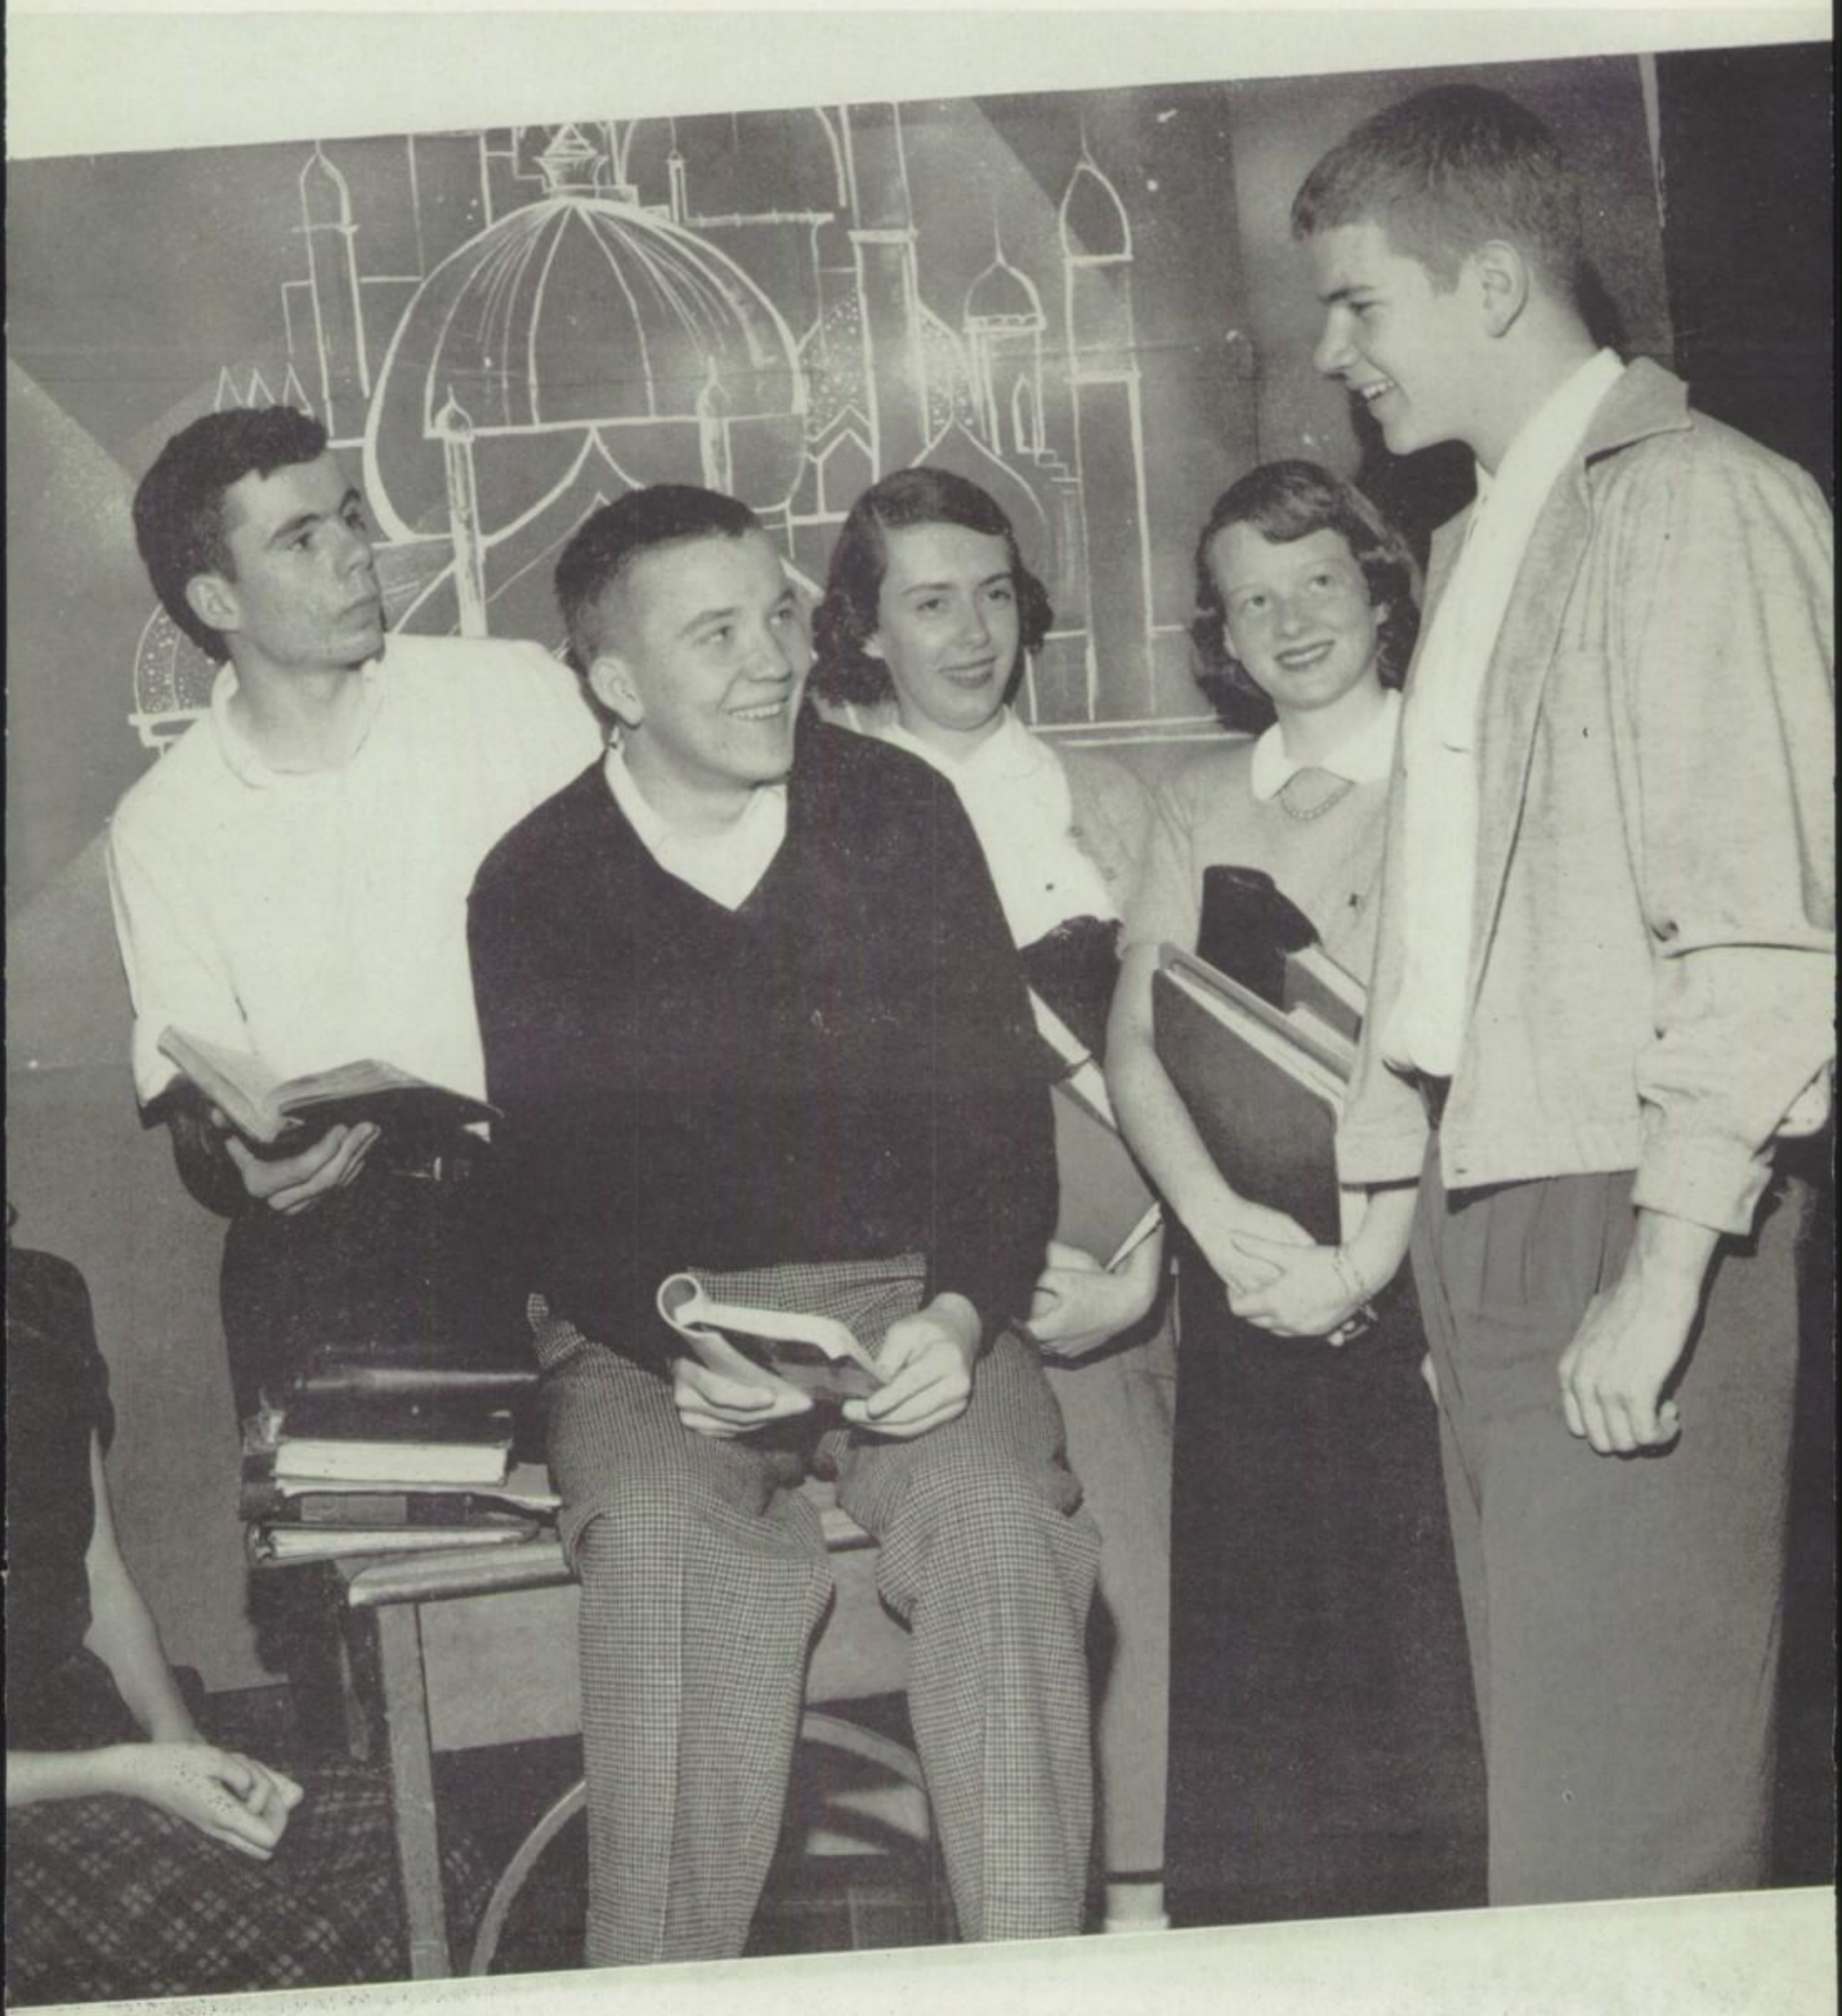
Classes . . . the tale of the six gates

'Know then,' said Shaherazad, 'that the house had six gates, each more difficult to open. Many desired to open them, among them beggar and sheikh, potter and merchant, African and Persian. The ability and resourcefulness of each, however small, was needed to effect their entrance.' Ours is a tale of all kinds of people, their merits and failings, their daily triumphs and defeats, a virtual kaleidoscope of humanity. We of Walnut Hills come from varied religious, racial, and social backgrounds to form an integrated high school society. We share mutual interests and respect individual differences. Our talents in diverse fields may be developed through study and extracurricular activities. Coming from near and far in Cincinnati, we merge community loyalty with pride in school. Co-operation, with a pooling of ideas and energies, is the basis on which we build for a better tomorrow. We realize that only by a united effort can our common goals be achieved.

and how they were opened successfully



Seniors . . . beyond the final portal

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS: Joe Henninger, vice-president; Janet Schmidt, secretary; Siegfried Sieber, treasurer; Stewart Dunsker, president.

Husky Stewart Dunsker, senior class president, has shown outstanding ability on the football field and in the classroom alike, and in his many duties in Student Council, Student Court, and Big Brothers.

To the ever popular Joe Henninger was entrusted the double distinction of being vice-president of the Senior class and president of Student Council. However busy Joe was, he always had a cheerful smile for all.

Serving as secretary to her class, good natured Janet Schmidt listed also on her busy schedule her duties in Miss Clarke's Senior Council, her work as a Big Sister, and participation in Triple Trio and Revue.

As treasurer, Siegfried Sieber has displayed the same energy shown on the basketball court, or as an important member of the Big Brothers, Octette, and the Choir, three major upper school activities.

lies an untried world, a new beginning

The members of the senior class have governed the Councils and Courts of the school as the Sultans ruled the kingdoms of old. They have inspired the awe of Little Brothers and Sisters as giants and sorcerers. With their "slaves" they have produced the Remembrancer, the Gleam, and the Chatterbox; they have evolved the marvels of the Walnuts of '52, the Prom, and the exceptional WHHS swimming record; they have flooded the Honor Rolls in spirit of a new letter grading system; they have indulged their youth in Baby Day, they have made "Much Ado About Nothing" a success; and, like the Genie of the Lamp, they seem to have vanished in a puff of nitrogen dioxide. But even after graduation, the school will find that they have not vanished entirely, for they have established the tradition of Senior Receptionists. They have left their Class Gift and the properties of their Last Will and Testament. They have passed the sixth and final threshold. They have stood before the whole school, joyous in the fullness of their achievement, yet sad too, in the realization that they must soon start afresh. The value of friendship, experience, and added wisdom may be as yet unassessed, yet to the seniors they will become of inestimable worth on the journey ahead to a world broader in scope than any that they have ever before beheld.

And Shaherazad continued her story for the Sultan. A poor fisherman once dwelt on the shore of the Great Sea. One day, after casting his nets from morn to eve without reward, he drew up an ancient copper vessel. He removed the stopper. Immediately lightning and a cloud of green smoke burst forth to form a towering genie. Ungratefully he demanded his redeemer's death, but the terrified fisherman agreed to die if his curiosity could be satisfied. He said that the genie was too huge to issue from the small jar. The genie's affirmation was met by disbelief, so to win the argument the genie re-entered the jar. The sly man replaced the jar's lid, and hurled the recaptured genie far into the sea.

For Miss Rosemary Hope this year has been a final link in an exciting tale. During the past four years she has guided the class of '52 over the many hurdles and pitfalls of high school life. She has witnessed its constant growth and ever-increasing responsibility. In this tale she will recall the headaches of the 'Peanuts', stacks of college recommendations, class rings misfitted, graduation announcements, two perfect BA Proms, an equally perfect Sophomore Dance, a novel Freshman Party, and a meticulously censored class prophesy. To the class she has been a real companion, a prime organizer, a scenery painter, a throaty vocalist, and to the classics students of the class, a teacher who could most successfully instruct them in "Hic-haec-hoc." But above all she has been a truest friend. The class of '52 shall always remember her with warmth and gratitude.

Miss Hope, Senior Class Advisor.

Seniors are, "lords of all they survey," but not for long. Their hopes were all of the future and their tale, one of preparation. They pored over college catalogues, survived the anguish of college boards, and finally were rewarded by the coveted letter of admission. Their foundation for college life extended even to the regrettable extreme of source themes. There was a good deal of serious consideration of a career, too. They endured many aptitude tests, conferences with advisors, and just plain worrying before they finally arrived at even a temporary decision. Their anticipation of the future made the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" bearable, but they still shed a few tears. For all their seriousness, however, the seniors weren't above a backward look, in the form of a hilariously funny "Baby Day."

CENTER: Aladdin, an expression of our story.

Juniors . . . an avenue of achievement

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS: John Bennett, treasurer; Jan Marx, secretary; Stan Weis, vice-president; Paul Vitz, president.

Paul Vitz, president of the junior class, spent most of his autumn afternoons playing football but he also was a member of Student Court and German Club. He served on the Executive Committee of Big Brothers.

For Stan Weis, vice-president, the highlight of the year was his job as co-director of the Peanuts. He was on the track team and active in Current History Club.

Jan Marx, secretary of the class, was also a member of A Cappella Choir. The Peanuts occupied many of her spare hours and Jan served for her third year in the pony chorus of the Walnuts.

Entrusted with the class treasury, John Bennett was also president of Miss Lotze's Light Crew. He added his bass voice to the A Cappella Choir and took an active part in the German Club.

stretches toward approaching challenge

A pilgrim once found his path barred by a mountain exceedingly smooth and slippery throughout. Trial revealed the only method of advancing to be climbing two steps while falling back one. He accepted this arduous task patiently and in time was rewarded with the summit. The juniors, too, sometimes encountered difficulties as they worked toward the eminence of the seniors. Increased responsibilities and achievements prepared this class for their last year of high school. Some eleventh-graders claimed parts in the Junior Dramatic Club's presentation, "Major Barbara" while others held positions on the staffs of school publications. The athletes gained experience participating in sports. Big Brothers, Student Court, and Hi-Y also drew junior members. Distinctive to the class of '53 was the Peanuts, staged under the guidance of the advisor, Mr. Welsh. Another highlight of the year was the B-A Prom, an event eagerly awaited and carefully organized. The problem of time-consuming extra-curricular activities and increased study requirements often forced Juniors to budget their hours. The year brought triumphs and occasional disappointments, but the class as a whole gained a steadier purpose and a more mature outlook for the future.

The show must go on! In the best tradition, the Peanuts drove everyone connected with it happily crazy. Each junior hoped to be picked at tryouts. There was alluring publicity, hectic rehearsals with directors Weis and Haygood plus the untiring Mr. Welsh trying to organize the acts. Then—the show. "Will I fall down when I get out there?" "I'll forget all the words to my song, I know." "Where's my partner?" At last, in an amazingly short time, it was all over. Nothing fatal happened, although the cast made a few funny mistakes. With the initial production past, they were ready for next year's Walnuts. About this time, the juniors remembered that they'd be the big wheels next year. What an exciting prospect to look forward to. And there was an added piquancy to watching the seniors come down the aisle, when they knew that they were going to take their places. The future looked bright and the juniors ended their tale on a note of high expectancy.

Popular Bill Fessenden was president of the class of '54. He has been active as Sectional Editor of the Remembrancer and Secretary of the Latin Club. He also appeared in the fall production of "Major Barbara."

Although only in his second year of high school, vice-president Ralph Kendricks earned a position on the varsity football team and starred in basketball. Come spring, he showed talent in track as well.

Secretary of the class of '54, vivacious Ruthie Johnston has taken active part in Y-Teens, Glee Club, Choir, and the Advertising Staff of the Remembrancer. She has also maintained an honor roll average.

Keeping careful watch over sophomore funds, cheerful Gary Marcus still found time to contribute to the literary staffs of both the Gleam and Remembrancer, and to write for the Chatterbox Sports Staff.

they enter a future full of promise

Sindbad the sailor-merchant, in his many famous journeys around the world, encountered crises from sea-sickness to cannibals and the Old Man of the Sea in person. But through his skill with bow and knife and fingers, through quick wits and understanding of human nature, through faith and kindness, Sindbad was successful in every battle. The Sophomores have just embarked upon their adventures —Although they have not reached such high positions as club presidencies, editorships, and leading dramatic roles, they are preparing and proving themselves by participation in all the school activities. Those gifted in dramatics got parts in "Major Barbara" or helped entertain in the "Walnuts of '52." The musically inclined were members of band, orchestra, Glee Club, or A Cappella Choir. The Remembrancer, Chatterbox, and Gleam benefitted by their assistance. Some members of the class made their debut in athletics—a lucky few on varsity teams, others on reserve teams. All of the Sophomores worked together under the leadership of Mrs. Madge Galbreath, the class advisor, to produce the annual Sophomore Dance, the "Syncopated Swing." Like Sindbad, they have displayed their efficiency and energy in these essential basic jobs and thus proved that they are equal to the dramatic moments: the decisive roles they will hold in the next few years.

"Of course there's nothing wrong with me, but—. Oh, those health exams!" Even if they were in the best of health, the sophomores could not help feeling just a little anxious. And to many there was the horrible uncertainty, "What if I should faint?" Of course no one did, and after a few days they were very relieved to be veterans of the annual health examinations. It was with a great deal of pleasure that the sophomore class turned to the lighter side of things. The Sophomore Dance, their annual class project, had been an event long awaited by the members of the class. Numerous committees were appointed, and everyone worked together to try to produce a successful dance. The result was good music, delicious food, and a good time for everybody. Wasn't it grand when they knew that they did it all themselves, that they upheld the tradition set by preceeding classes by producing another success? With the completion of their first large scale project as a class, the tenth graders came of age. The tale of the sophomores is one of infinite variety with rewarding activities on every page.

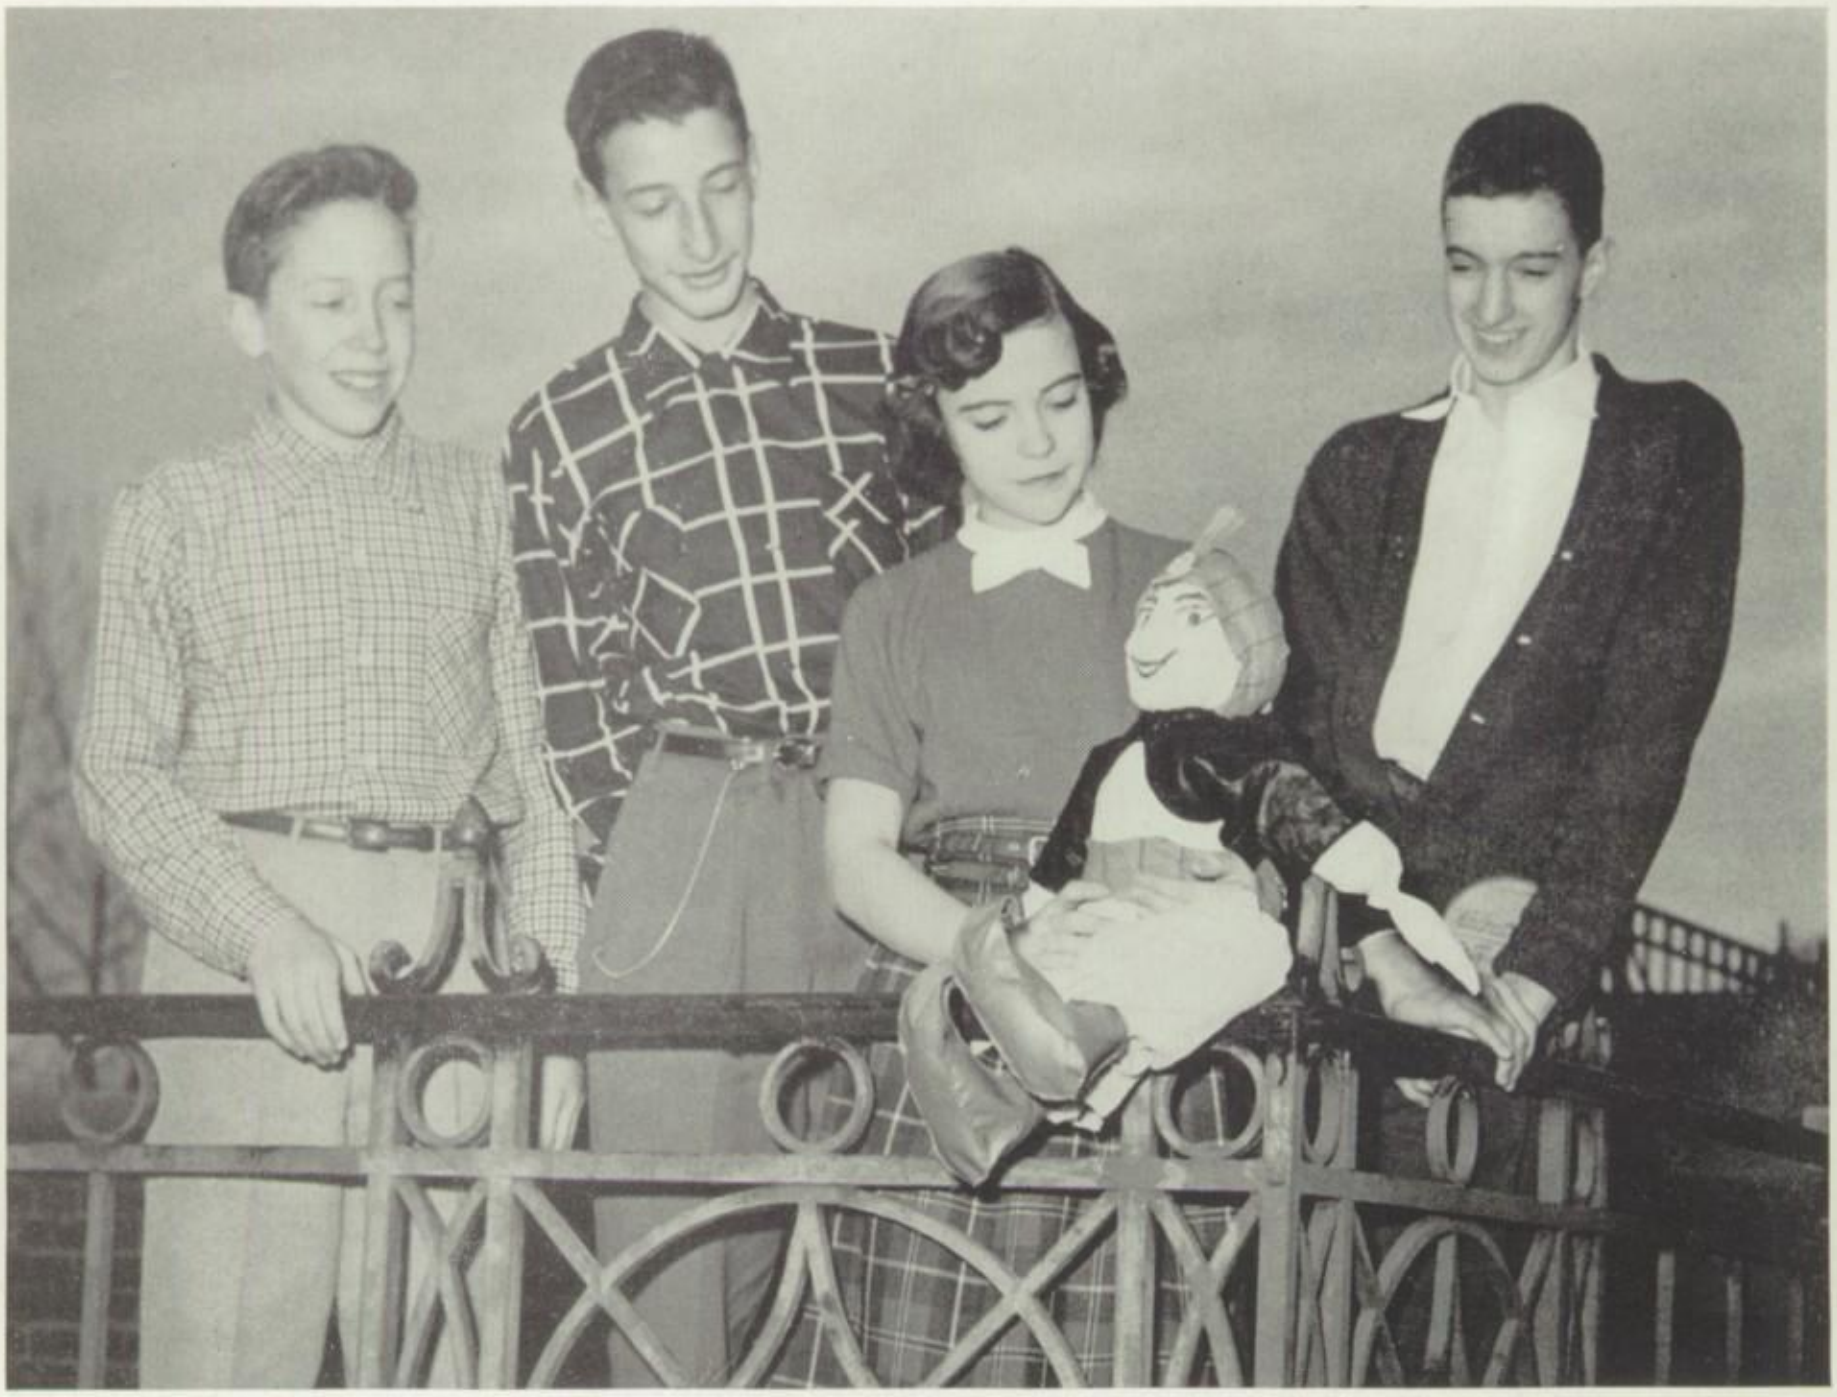
Freshmen . . . for the inquiring mind



FRESHMAN CLASS OFFICERS: Mark Israel, treasurer; Fred Sanders, vice-president; Nancy Condon, secretary; Bob Hamilton, president.

President of the class of '55 was rugged Bob Hamilton. Bob's activities included all types of sports with emphasis on football and basketball. Bob also played in both the marching and concert band.

Friendly Fred Sanders, a former Class Leader, held the office of vice-president this year. Taking part in the freshman basketball team and the Chess Club, he was also on the Executive Committee, Student Council.

The secretary of the class of '55 was active Nancy Condon. Musically talented, Nancy participated in the Glee Club and Dance Club. She was also in G.A.A., Student Council, and twice a veteran of the Walnuts.

Guiding the finances of the class was Mark Israel, whose interests here at Walnut Hills have centered mainly around baseball and basketball.

opens a new door of understanding

"Accordingly, Ali Baba went among the shrubs, and perceiving a door concealed behind them, stood before it and said, "Open, Sesame! The door instantly flew open." Our freshmen, likewise, have perceived doors of opportunity—for adventure, riches, wisdom, service, and friendship. They said, "Open, Sesame!" and there were opened to them the doors of the Student Council, the Freshman Choir, and most of the other organizations of the school, including the athletic activities: they played on the freshman football and basketball teams and the junior swimming team. They explored Caesar's Commentaries and the x and y of algebra, and looked at life through microscopes or through the eye of history. They acquired the privilege of going to all assemblies. With the help of their newly elected adviser, Mr. Scheurer, they adventured into class projects such as the Freshman Party, and gained new friendships through joining various social clubs. Ali Baba was amazed to see a vault, well-lighted and spacious, with all sorts of provisions, rich bales of silk stuff, brocade, and valuable carpeting, piled upon one another, the freshman wonderingly tested his new-found power. Certainly he overlooked much of the treasure that later he might wish to use, but he wisely attempted to bear away as much wealth as he was able.

The tale of the freshmen entered a new phase as they found their places in the social life of the school. First, they met as a class for the first time to plan their own parties. Finally the long awaited time came as the sororities and fraternities opened their rushing season in search of new freshmen members. The rush parties brought bewilderment—what to wear, do, say? Then, after five weeks of royal treatment, and the thrill of being asked to join, came pledging—piles of books, crazy stunts, demerits. At last there was the ceremony of initiation, and the pride in having that pin to wear.

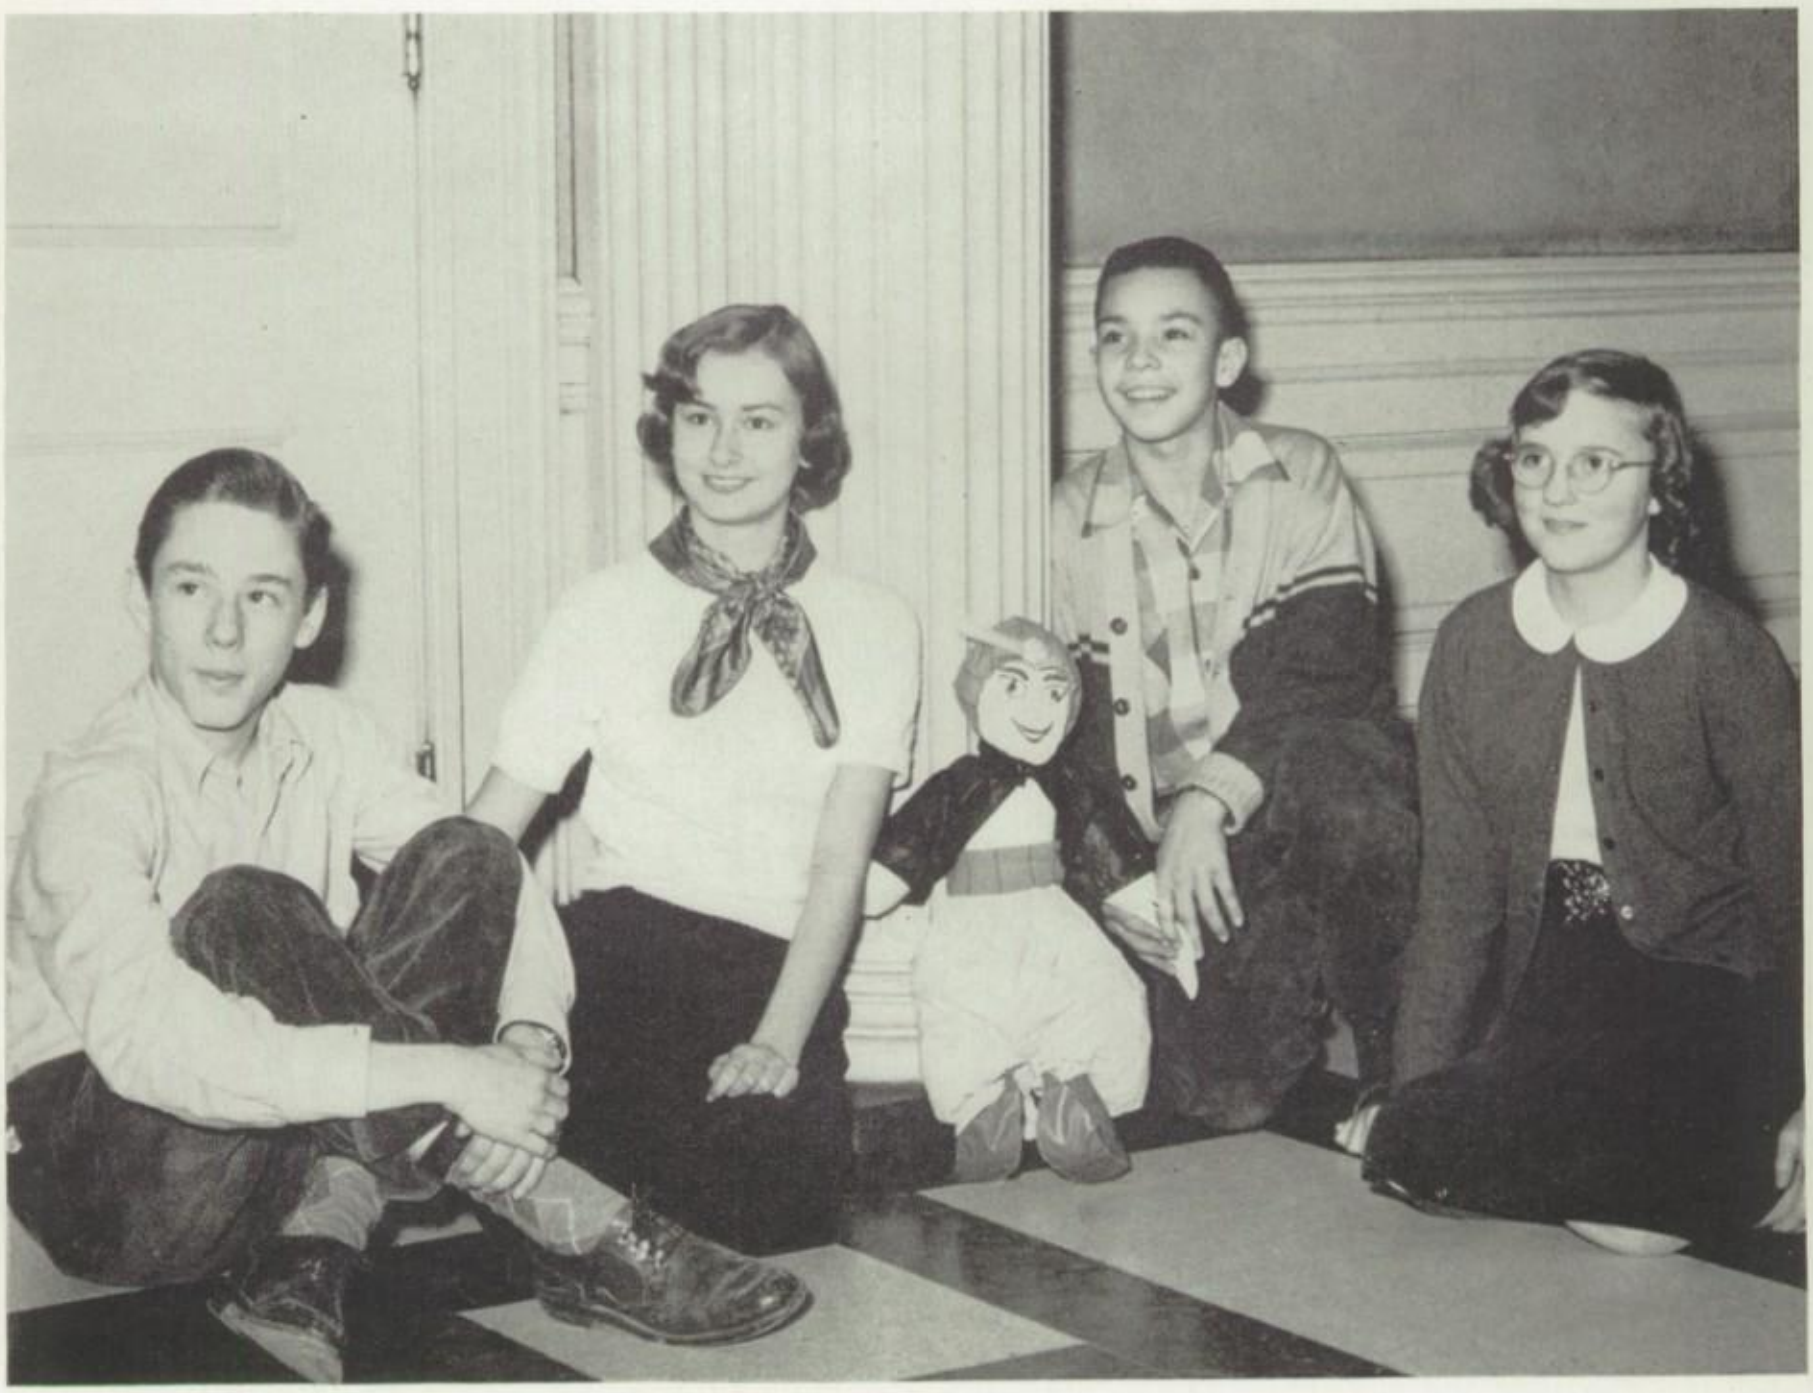
E-Flats . . . standing on the threshold



EIGHTH GRADE CLASS LEADERS: Jim Ervin, Jane Holwadel, Rossman Turpeau, Ann Gusweiler.

Athletic Ann Gusweiler has been interested in sports and enjoyed G.A.A. As manager of her swimming team she has shown positive qualities of leadership. Ann was also active in Latin Club and Junior Chorus.

Ambitious Rossman Turpeau has attained the presidency of Junior Latin Club. Through the successful presidency of his homeroom, Rossman has also shown his ability as leader.

Jane Holwadel, the reporter for Junior Highlights, is very athletic and has participated in all the G.A.A. activities. Interested in improving our school Jane was an alternate for Junior Student Council.

The vice-presidency of Junior Latin Club occupied Jim Ervin's time. However, he still set aside some time to fulfill his duties as treasurer of his homeroom.

they take another step toward maturity

"And the aged fisherman was borne in his craft to unknown waters wherein he beheld strange fishes. Whereupon, seized by a great desire to possess himself of them, he cast his net in the water and drew forth fish of many colors and shapes: yes, even of white, red, blue, and purest gold. And seeing them, he exclaimed, 'Lo, by Allah, there is much unknown to me of beauty and worth in this great sea!' " The eighth-grader, like the old fisherman, began to recognize the differences in his classmates—their faiths, their interests, their abilities, and qualities—and to accept and appreciate them as individuals. He saw his companions as executives, who rushed to Junior Student Council to discuss school problems, or as musicians, singing in the Junior Chorus and playing in the Band. Some appeared as athletes, the boys engaged in intramural football, basketball, and baseball, and the girls, in G.A.A. soccer and swimming; others, as entertainers and debaters in Latin Club, Girls' League, and Current History Club. A number he knew as serious students of Latin grammar and the geography of the Western Hemisphere; many, as good friends, all growing in leadership, responsibility, spirit, and sportsmanship for the future of Walnut Hills.

School spirit, home room spirit, any kind of spirit at all, has blossomed at Walnut Hills. Intramurals have beckoned to the eighth graders, who enjoyed to the full the sensation of being one of a team, of having a job to do. In more ways than one these eighth graders learned to accept responsibility. They began to play a part in Girls' League. They discovered the meaning of good citizenship at Walnut Hills, how to be of service to their school. They were taught parliamentary procedure, so that they might conduct their meetings in a businesslike and democratic manner. Most important of all, they are learning how to be the kind of students who will make a good, fair-thinking freshman class next year. The tale of the eighth graders is one of short lived superiority in the lower grades, just around the corner from a new start in high school.

RIGHT: Several e-flats are trying to learn how to make out their programs for the long awaited freshman year when they will be upper classmen at last! Miss McDevitt is giving them the help they need for this great step to independence.

SEVENTH GRADE CLASS LEADERS: Emily Perlman, Joe Schulzinger, Sybel Tversky, David Hall.

In addition to his title as class leader, Joe Schulzinger claimed a seat on Junior Student Council. He was also vice-president of the Seventh Grade Latin Club.

Not only has Dave Hall distinguished himself in his academic work by maintaining an honor roll average, but he has also found time to engage in his favorite sport, basketball.

Sybil Tversky has occupied an honored place on Junior Student Council. Sybil's extracurricular program included the Girls' League and the Seventh Grade Latin Club.

This year Emily Perlman ranked among the leaders of her class. Emily has become active in the Seventh Grade "Latina Societas."

they cast away groping uncertainty

"There was in ancient times a boy king, who, like his ancestors, the Kings of the Sea, went forth into the ocean at a certain age, walking therein as upon land, without being wetted, through the powers of the Seal of Solomon, by incantations and lotions." Just so in this age our seventh graders have plunged into a sea—immense, strange, full of fears and marvels and knowledge—and, through the advice and care of teachers and Big Brothers and Sisters, they have learned to walk, as on familiar ground, without hesitation or anxiety. They have begun a new language, Latin, and have faced their first examinations with not a little fear. They have participated in intramural sports, the G.A.A., Girls' League, Junior Chorus, and Junior Latin Club. They have made new friends. There has been one change, however, which they have not been forced to make—the adjustment to the new grading system—because the new system is similar to the one used in most of their elementary schools. And now when these young new-comers have finished their year of becoming acquainted, they are ready to accept the more difficult work and the greater responsibility awaiting them, and to take their places as true Sons and Daughters of Walnut Hills, their Kingdom and their Sea.

Welcome to Walnut Hills. This greeting was but recently extended to the members of the seventh grade, as they embarked on an exciting experience that was to last them six years. Big Brothers and Sisters helped them adjust. As they threaded their way through the puzzling maze of swimming, home rooms, Latin, and assemblies, the students who sat up in the balcony worked out solutions; and after mastering their first examinations, they began to feel themselves a part of the Walnut Hills tale.

Activities . . a tale of infinite opportunity

And Sheherazad wove a tale saying, "In a distant land there dwelt three men of equal rank and wealth. Of these, one worked from morn to night without rest, one sought to amuse himself with idle pleasures, the third wisely mixed diligent labor with well used leisure time. To him alone was the full joy of life revealed . . . " Our tale is also one of happiness and success gained through a balanced program of occupations. Activities are the keys to extracurricular development and recreation. At Walnut Hills, there are organizations to answer various needs and exploit talents in almost any direction. Friendships grow as clubs popularize the languages, arts, and sciences of the classroom. Hobbyists meet to exchange ideas and creative abilities are discovered on stage and in print. Everyone has a chance to serve those around him as a member of the many groups dedicated to maintaining and improving school standards. A sound character, trained faculties, and the memory of fun and fellowship—these are the products of our "lessons out of school."

It is only natural that a school such as Walnut Hills have a legislative body based upon our democratic ideals. The Senior Student Council, comprised of leaders from every upper school class, serves in both a governing and advisory capacity. Matters effecting the school as a whole are given thorough attention and decisions reached on current problems are translated into effective action. Council this year has changed its meetings from every other Monday afternoon to Thursdays during school hours. This eliminated conflict with other extracurricular activities and made possible an increased attendance. As president, Joe Henninger has conducted the business with the able assistance of Miss Helen Sanford, faculty advisor. Among the more important issues facing council has been that of wider representation in the governing body. Considerable debate has been aroused by a proposal to have one member from each home room as part of the new guidance program. To promote efficient operation, council members have at various times patrolled the up and down stairways, the lunchroom, and the halls. Announcements on the radio and frequent Chatterbox articles kept the students informed of new policies and recommendations. The spirit of school pride and co-operation was encouraged. Student Council through the years has become a prime force in maintaining high standards and developing qualified leadership.

The Executive Committee of Student Council is composed of elected members from the Council at large plus its ex-officio representatives. This vital part of Council assembles on alternate Thursdays to consider what topics should be deliberated on in the regular meetings.

The future executives of Walnut Hills discover their abilities and become familiar with self-government through Junior Student Council. Sheldon Greenfield holds the gavel of this organization comprised of representatives elected from the seventh and eighth grade home rooms. It convenes alternate Mondays under the capable administration of Mr. Harold Buxton. Topics for discussion are received from suggestions found in the student suggestion box.

For the transgressor just consideration

Senior Council is composed of five outstanding senior girls selected to be Miss Clarke's 'Five Fingers'. Discussion and advice on girls' activities occupies the group's Tuesday luncheon meetings. The members aid in directing Big Sisters, student aid, and ushers.

The judicial branch of Walnut Hills' student government is charged with interpreting school rules. Student Court's seven members, elected from the junior and senior classes, help to maintain discipline under the guidance of Mr. Henry Schroeder. The court has power to mete out just sentences to boy pupils found guilty of misdemeanors.

For the perplexed a helping hand

Remember how we felt, those first few days at Walnut Hills? Everything was so strange, and we knew so few people, that we couldn't help feeling just a little scared. And then, we met our Big Sister, and suddenly we became more relaxed and began to enjoy ourselves. This is the primary purpose of the Big Sisters and Big Brothers, to help the effies get into the swing of life at Walnut Hills, to make them feel that each of them is equally important as the loftiest senior. To accomplish this goal, the two organizations give get-acquainted parties for their charges, show them around their new school, and entertain the effies during the year. Big Sisters and Big Brothers maintain an interest in their seventh-graders throughout the school year, particularly at report-card time. The seniors praise A's, and find out what's causing F's. And the effies, not yet blase upper-classmen, get a real thrill out of exhibiting good grades, and strive to get them. This year's edition of Big Brothers is headed by Bob Buss and advised by Mr. Schroeder, while the combined efforts of Miss Clarke and Charlotte Wright keep Big Sisters functioning smoothly.

Service benefits ourselves and others

The unselfish enterprise of the Junior Red Cross group, directed by Miss Esther Marie Cahill and president Pat Dilley, not only helps the Red Cross in its world-wide efforts to aid the sick and needy, but gives the members of the group a definite satisfaction in positive accomplishment. The club collected funds and sent a $135 student chest to the deserving of Europe. As another project, some zoology students put in time after school working at the Blood Bank.

Organization out of confusion and co-operation instead of opposition — these are the achievements of the Interfratority Council. This board of social club representatives has improved relations with the school and co-ordinated the clubs' activities. The Council has helped to standardize rushing and to eliminate conflicts in social events, under the direction of Miss Mary Sellers. The presiding officer for the first half year was George Starr, while Bob Lovett held the gavel during the second semester.

The Girls' League, under the guidance of Miss Olive M. Clark, is open to all girls from grades seven to twelve. Its purpose is to give as many girls as possible a little "platform" experience; to provide opportunity for the less aggressive to secure recognition; and to illustrate the importance of good followership as well as good leadership. Each year, twelve capable senior girls are chosen as "Cap" leaders. They direct the various grades in staging the monthly programs and in carrying out philanthropic projects.

The second Wednesday of every month is a day looked forward to by many of the avid science devotees of Walnut Hills. It is on this day that Chi Epsilon Mu, the Chemistry Club, has its meetings. By means of many fascinating experiments, the marvels of modern chemistry are brought to life for those students who crave more knowledge. Membership is open to any chemistry student. Gene Mihaly held the gavel this year. X.E.M. was under the guidance of Mr. Welsh. The first meeting on the agenda was the address of Dean Joseph Kowalesky of the College of Pharmacy. Other meetings, conducted by the students themselves featured pyrotechinics, a demonstration of liquid air, and infrared photography.

"Good morning! This is your Radio Guild, bringing you the latest edition of the news!" The sound of these words has become familiar during a thousand and one days at Walnut Hills, thanks to Mr. Gregory and a corps of one hundred early-rising speech students. During the first semester the Radio Guild announcers were seniors. The two chosen by their fans at midterm as the best radio reporters were Connie Lieder and Lew Gatch. During the second semester the announcers were juniors. Besides giving us the highlights of the political and international scenes three times a week, the Radio Guild provides good medicine for that morbid, Monday-morning mood, by offering us the humorous twist, the latest report on the senior home room rivalry, or the current Walnut Hills football scores.

The Remembrancer—a treasury of recollections for all who have been a part of the living Walnut Hills tale—has still greater meaning to those who worked on it. Every page recalls some incidents, a layout whose proportions were impossible, a headline too short, or a troublesome bleed. Despite its small problems the "book" as it is affectionately called by the staff provides a truly rewarding experience for all connected with it. The maze of management, make-up, writing, and photography details became understandable as time went on. Lacking the invaluable advice and assistance of Miss Schroth for part of the year, the staffers occasionally despaired of meeting their deadlines. But a joke about the "loose leaf annual" or a pep talk by Editor Connie Lieder sent them back to tackle the job afresh. Yet those who made the Remembrancer Room their part time home were never too busy to enjoy a chuckle and the atmosphere of fun and fellowship helped everyone over the rough spots.

Behind the distribution every Tuesday morning of the Walnut Hills school paper, The Chatterbox, is a series of events of which few people are aware. Into each issue of the Chatterbox which reaches the student went the diligent labor of a hard-working group of boys and girls, the members of the Chatterbox staff. Led by co-editors Betty Hellman and Carl Solway, the staff members began on the Tuesday preceding the date of publication to plan for the paper. The news was gathered, written into articles, proofread, copyread, rewritten, and after it had finally received a stamp of approval was ready to become a part of next week's Chatterbox. On Thursday night the final work of organizing the paper was done. Working with "dummies" the editors planned, tore up, and replanned, until they were convinced that this week's Chatterbox would be the best issue yet. Such thoughtful care and planning by the staff members and the literary advisor Miss Anne Sutherland have made the Chatterbox the first class paper that it is.

True literary effort gains recognition

GLEAM STAFF EDITORS: E. Bronstein, lit.; C. Carmel, co-ed.; P. Stein, co-ed.

For the first time the Gleam, our literary magazine, published one edition instead of the usual three. The pages of this larger edition contained selected student essays, poems, sports, and short stories. A traditionally favorite column was "I Remember," which reviews the outstanding activities of the school year. Edited by Carol Carmel and Phyllis Stein and advised by Miss Mary Louise Schroth, the Gleam remains the only literary magazine in the Cincinnati Public High Schools. Certainly this year's Gleam, as those of the past half century, has provided the students of Walnut Hills an excellent outlet for the expression of creative talent.

for these scribes gain national honors

Because of their exceptional work on the Remembrancer, the Chatterbox, and the Gleam, eleven Walnut Hills students have been chosen to Quill and Scroll this year. Quill and Scroll is a national journalist society for high school students who have done outstanding work on publications. At Walnut Hills candidates must have at least a 2.5 average. Dan Baum, Connie Lieder, Betty Hellman, and Joe Henninger, who fill offices of president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary, respectively, were elected last spring. With the aid of advisers, Miss Schroth and Miss Sutherland, they elected the additional members at midyear. The pride of wearing the gold pin is a partial reward for the achievements of hours of work. The eleven chosen have shown their ability through consistent efforts and in doing so have helped make our publications among the best.

A few of the activities they sponsored this year were the Sports Spree Dance, the Sports Banquet and the management of the popcorn machine. The Hi-Y also took part in athletic leagues and provided a fine series of interesting meetings for its members. The Senior Hi-Y was guided by Mr. Leeds, the Junior Hi-Y by Mr. Buxton. The presidents of the organizations were Don Fryburger, Bob Naugle, and Owen King respectively.

With Sue Levy as president and Miss Rosemary Hope as their new advisor, this is perhaps the busiest year that the Eagle Y-Teens have ever seen. Their many activities included a dance, a Christmas program for Jackson School, and a lecture on teen-age problems by a well-known psychologist. Y-Teens, open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors, is a junior branch of the Y.W.C.A. and an International Organization. Their purpose is to know and understand themselves and others and to promote world, freedom and brotherhood.

"Der deutsche Verein" this year followed its traditional practise of combining entertainment with worth while projects. Led by Peter Bridge with the guidance of Miss Kitzman, the members reveled in their annual Rootbeer "Fest" and among other contributions bought a set of German Song Books for the club and sent a Care package to Germany. Their programs were indeed "atmosphaerisch" in the old German sense.

"Saludos Amigos," or "Greetings, Friends!" has met every fourth Wednesday for those entertaining and varied programs that supplement their classroom knowledge of Spanish and the Spanish speaking countries. Led by Rosalie Perez and sponsored by Mrs. Suid, this group has among other interesting experiences visited the Spanish Inn, and listented to an illustrated talk of a member who had visited Mexico.

Through a planned and varied program, the Senior Latin Club presented the Latin language and customs in a stimulating fashion which captured the spirit of the Roman world. One of their outstanding speakers was Dr. McGregor of the University of Cincinnati. The group presented an original play bringing the habits of a long dead civilization into a modern perspective. Headed by Joan Jurgenson and advised by Miss Riffe, this profitable activity provided learning in an enjoyable manner. The seventh and eighth grade Latin Clubs, perhaps the most popular lower school organization, were guided by Miss Pelton and interested Latin students.

Discussion of a case and all its sides

Confidence on the rostrum, persuasive delivery, and logical thinking—these are assets well worth having to the modern citizen. The Debate Club, under the guidance of Miss Levensohn, gives its members the training and experience needed to become capable public speakers. During the year debates were held with several schools on topics of national and local interest. Another project was the annual Junior Town Meeting which took the form of an informal discussion concerning practical training for citizenship in the public schools. President Carol Taube also directed forums on homework and extracurricular activities.

brings understanding of today's problems

One of the most popular and profitable clubs in Walnut Hills is the Current History Club. The club meets every other Wednesday afternoon and discusses issues of world and national interest. Bringing issues before the club are student panels, chosen from within the club itself, and outside speakers, who inform the club on subjects with which they are connected. Some of the speakers this year were Michael DiSalle, former wage stabilizer, Dr. Radcliffe; and a foreign exchange student. The faculty advisor for the club was Miss Margaret Dunphy, and the president was Jack Davis.

Meeting every Monday was the Chess Club, with Mr. Jacob Skilken as advisor. This group, with membership open to all, engaged other schools in scheduled tournaments. Under the presidency of John Bennett, the club taught novices the intricacies of chess while keeping the wits of experienced players sharp through frequent matches.

Interesting bits of history, geography, and art, in addition to solid enjoyment, rewarded members of the Stamp Club as they relaxed with their favorite hobby. Meetings were spent trading stamps and gaining valuable hints from speakers. This year witnessed the first annual stamp contest directed by president Ted Silberstein and advisor Miss Wilkinson.

with constructive, rewarding relaxation

Providing enjoyable relaxation after school for those interested in bowling is the Bowling Club. The team competes every Tuesday afternoon with the teams of other schools or among themselves. The captain of the team this year was Joe Henninger, with the top team average of 145 points. The team finished the year with a defeat in the annual faculty match.

The Crafters Club, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Carmichael, provides additional opportunity in the field of ceramics for pupils taking arts and crafts. This year the goal for each member of the club was to create a collection of table decorations, a musical figure, and a human head. The activities of the club included a demonstration of clay-modeling at a local department store, and a sale of their best works, the proceeds from which helped to pay for the cost of materials.

A brilliant image on stage or screen

Under the able leadership of Mr. Thomas Welsh, the Visual Aids Department presents movies and slides for the education and enjoyment of both students and faculty alike. The members of the crew are subject to the call of duty during their study halls. Showing motion pictures for the science and social studies departments constitutes their main work. In order to operate the complicated apparatus the students are required to pass a special test. Often in the excitement of a big production, the hard work of the scenery painters is overlooked. Under the artistic direction of Mrs. Pfister, the painters plied their trade on scenery, stage construction and lighting. These select students busied themselves on the productions of "Major Barbara," "Much Ado About Nothing," "The Walnuts," and the Homecoming. Heading this group of diligent workers were the co-chairmen Ray Dooley and Paula Hoffman.

the work of clever unseen hands

Many students of Walnut Hills were connected with one or possibly more of the numerous productions presented in our auditorium this year. Each knows how long and hard he himself worked on his own production—"Major Barbara," "Much Ado About Nothing," Walnuts. But put the work of all these productions together, add to it the work spent preparing countless other auditorium presentations, and you have the time schedule of the stage and light crews. These crews play as important a part, although unseen, as do the people who are before the audience. They plan and carry out all the technical work connected with shows, including the planning, constructing, and changing of scenery, and the producing of special sound and lighting effects. They accent the acting on the stage. Many of these boys spend at least half of their one thousand afternoons at Walnut Hills working on our stage, one of the most fully equipped in any high school. Their achievements are invaluable, their time immeasurable.

The stage creates in "Major Barbara"

Few members of the audience could realize the amount of time and effort spent in the production of "Major Barbara," the Junior Dramatic Club's twenty-first production. The production staffs and the cast of 70, under the untiring direction of Mr. Gregory, rehearsed daily for two months—months in which lines had to be memorized, stage movements learned, scenery built and painted, lighting set, and Salvation Army costumes studied. The rehearsals passed all too quickly; dress rehearsal came and went. But despite all worries, the play was a highly successful production—a fitting culmination for the hours of preparation the cast shall never forget.

a Shavian world of wit and wisdom

This year, for its twenty-first annual production, the Junior Dramatic Club presented George Bernard Shaw's social comedy, "Major Barbara." The date of the performance, November 2, was significant, for it marked the first anniversary of the playwright's death. The story, in typical Shavian style, deals with the family of a millionaire munitions maker, Andrew Undershaft. His daughter, Barbara, has rejected her family wealth and become a major in the Salvation Army. When Undershaft gives a large sum to the Army, Barbara leaves her work because she believes they should not accept money from such a source. However, when Barbara visits her father's factory, she is impressed by the model village and happy workers, and accepts the town as her new field of religion.

bard's "Much Ado About Nothing"

Continuing the tradition of Shakespeare at Walnut Hills, the annual Shakespearean luncheon was held in December. The luncheon was attended by many alumni as well as this year's performers. An unusual honor came to Walnut Hills when the production was chosen as the outstanding high school production in Ohio. The cast presented the play in Athens, Ohio, for the Ohio-West Virginia drama convocation.

UPPER LEFT: Lew Gatch as Borrachio, Mitchell Myers as Prince John, and Jim Brown as Conrad conspire against Hero. Music and laughter

"Walnuts" time is "Star Time"! This year the stars shone more brightly than ever! Remember the snobbish "Mamselle" Stephanie Dingle, daughter of huffy Elijah, the owner of Dingle's Department Store? Stephanie's "Wandering Boy Friend," Don Ridge, the assistant buyer, who "Used to Say the Sweetest Things" to her, ended up singing his "Song of Love" to the drab little secretary, Ellen Jones, who suddenly brightened up when she found herself "Swinging on a Star" of love. And, remember Maurice de Lanthe, the French fashion-designer who caused a crisis at the store when he failed to show up to open the "Fashion Fantasie."

re-echo in the Walnuts

Then there were the bumbling hired help, Bill and Josie, and the saleswoman, Miss Miggs, who contrived to get Stephanie out of Ellen's way, by fair means or foul; and over-bearing Mrs. Smythe and Don's cantankerous Uncle Calvin. Besides the comic plot, the "Walnuts of '52" was a sore "Temptation" to "Paw and Maw" and the rest of us to spend our dollars, because of a Precision Chorus that was really precise, choirs with more warbles than a "Hot Canary," and hard-working production staffs backing up the cast. Under the capable direction of Mr. Earl Snapp, this year's Walnuts high-lighted the schools best talent with a fine revue.

UPPER RIGHT: Nancy Marx tap dances to "Blue Skies." CENTER, LEFT: The "Hearts and Gowns" continuity is enacted by Mary Roth, Dick Gooder, Jay Shuchter, and Gerry Torf. Now rich, now brilliant, now soft, Led by Mrs. Nelle Custer Murphy, the A Cappella Choir is one of Walnut Hills' finest organizations. Noted for its quality and appearance, the group is composed of one hundred and forty-eight selected students, talented and interested in music. Rehearsing every fifth period, the choir has won highest praise and respect for its uniformly high standard of achievement. The choir performed at the Thanksgiving Assembly, the Christmas, Winter, and Spring Concerts, in addition to forming the Revue Choir. Always in demand by outside organizations, the choir sang at such places as the University of Cincinnati, the Pleasant Ridge Presbyterian Church, The Buckeye Club and Mid-West Physical Education Convention. The Revue Choir entertained at the National Principal's Convention, as many other clubs and churches shared the choir's talent.

The varied repertoire of the choir, with selections ranging from delightful popular to the finest in serious compositions, provides musical versatility, enhancing any program. With Thor Johnson as conductor, the choir sang in a combined chorus at Christmas, and in a May Festival Matinee, gaining experience and mastering additional songs. Representative of the choirs' presentations are the following songs: "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor" by Irving Berlin; "Alleluia" by Randal Thompson; "Soon Ah Will Be Done awid the Troubles of the World," a Negro Spiritual; "You'll Never Walk Alone," from "Carousel" by Rodgers and Hammerstein; "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel; "The Breadth and Extent of Man's Empire" by Harl MacDonald; "Glory to God our Father" by Bach; and an arrangement including the orchestra, "Finlandia" by Sibelius.

The appearance of Mrs. Murphy's Boys' Octette was always eagerly awaited at any school musical production. The audience knew that the group could be depended on for excellent harmony spiced with a liberal amount of clowning. Rehearsing before school, the Octette developed the style which made them so much sought after by outside organizations.

Triple Trio, the girls' vocal ensemble at Walnut Hills, was another of the rewarding activities sponsored by the music department. At special programs, including the Christmas assembly and the Spring Concert, these nine young singers stepped from their places in choir to blend their full-toned voices. The three sopranos, three second sopranos and three altos were chosen in the fall by Mrs. Murphy from among talented applicants.

The Girls' Glee Club, presided over this year by Gail Fisher, included over a hundred girls from the ninth through twelfth grade. In the fall tryouts are held for the new members, who are selected by the director, Mrs. Murphy. The club meets each Monday after school in preparation for their two principal concerts: the Christmas assembly with the choir, and the annual Spring Concert. Their work provides excellent practice for their voices and in addition gives them a quarter of a credit toward graduation.

STRING QUARTET: Stanley Gumble, Violin; Sarah Stone, Violin; Mary Stone, Cello; Carolyn Kimber, Viola.

The Orchestra members were heartily applauded by the school for the tremendous progress they have made this year in the quality of their performances at plays, concerts, and commencement. Within Band and Orchestra, some players took part in ensembles such as the String Quartet and the Brass Sextet. Several of the best solo and ensemble players took high ratings in State Music Contests this year. This year the Orchestra instituted the well received practice of playing before assemblies. Directed by Mr. Earl Snapp, the orchestra began performing for the student body as often as possible.

This year, under the baton of Mr. Snapp, the new Director, the Walnut Hills Band has stepped up—in numbers, in playing ability, in zeal, and in efficiency. The Band has been reorganized under a new Constitution, with their own officers, point system, and special awards. Band activities this year included new, livelier shows for the football games, a Memorial Day Parade, the February Band-Orchestra Concert, a school assembly, and a Band Banquet. The renewed practice of marching at games this year brought much acclaim to the band, whose formations were outstanding, unusual and excellently organized and maneuvered.

The 1951-52 Movie Series, co-directed by Ed Lowenstein and Jim Ziegler, brought a fine collection of ten recent and popular movies to the students of Walnut Hills. Some of the outstanding movies this year were "Cheaper By The Dozen," "The Life of Louis Pasteur," and "Make Mine Music." There were four technicolor movies, and all the features were accompanied by cartoons. The profits from the Series, to which four hundred students subscribed, will help pay for the new carbon-arc projector.

Although not everyone possesses special musical talent, many people may take enjoyment from the hearing and study of fine music. To further this end, the Music Appreciation Club planned a series of programs featuring instrumental soloists, speakers, and classical and modern recordings. Led by president Emmy Heldman, the club also viewed a movie illustrating changes in musical expression from early works to jazz.

The finest and most satisfying reward for work well done is the recognition and respect of fellow scholars. And so when the senior passed the mid-year and still maintained an average of 92, it was a great pleasure and even greater honor to qualify for membership in the national Cum Laude Society. Others with averages of 89.5 were initiated at the end of the year. A spring banquet is sponsored yearly under the auspices of the national association and directed by Miss Becker, secretary of the local chapter.

From "The Arabian Nights"

From autumn's rich and evanescent hues

The autumn months pass in review before the eye of memory. September brings a new school year . . . the excitement of the first days and the glad meeting in the hall of friends not seen for a summer. The trees take on the gold and scarlet trappings of fall, and with October a hint of frost sharpens the air. Football games send the blood racing even as storm clouds darken the November sky.

The chill winds of winter recall the joys of a cheery fireside. The brown earth takes on a snow blanket as December ushers in the lights and good-will of Christmastide. Grads smile as the choir carols for Homecoming. January icicles festoon the eaves and the warmth of the school building becomes particularly inviting. Tire chains are in order as February holds sway.

WINTER: This blizzard retarded the opening of school for more than two hours.

The reawakening life all around forecasts spring. March winds scuttle the dry leaves around the courtyard, and rain beats a tattoo on the window panes. April sun glints on the filmy greenness of the willows and the yellow forsythia. May sees the candy men doing a land-office business while pigeons pace the circle sidewalks. Sunlight burns down in earnest from a June sky on the copper dome. The pillars fade in the distance and the school rests for the summer.

SPRING: The front steps become the scene for relaxation, as spring fever reduced activity.

the kaleidoscope of fleeting hours

Sports . . . a tale of the upward climb

And when the ship was well at sea, Sindbad and his crew were astonished to see a great bird bearing a rock in its talons. This was let fall in such manner that the vessel was sunk and many of the mariners drowned. Sindbad alone saved himself by swimming to an island. This was but one of many adventures in which the athletic prowess of the famed sailor served him in good stead. Although we may never encounter such dangers, we appreciate the advantages of a well-trained and co-ordinated body. After school our tale becomes one of practice and achievement on field, court, and track. We enjoy the sound of bat cracking on horsehide and the feeling of pride in a cleanly shot basket. The narrative begins with the intramural sports of lower school and progresses through the freshman and reserve squads to a final glory on the varsity team. But beyond mere enjoyment, we discover the spirit of co-operation, the benefits of teamwork, and the values of fellowship as we play the game fairly and well.

Although the 1951-1952 football season for the Walnut Hills Eagles wasn't too successful, the squad displayed much team spirit and showed encouraging signs of improvement towards the close of the season. Bolstered by quarterback Mike Schacht, up and coming sophomore, and Stu Dunsker, hard charging fullback, the Eagle team fought hard in most games of the season. The game with Woodward was by far the best game played by the Eagles all season. Walnut Hills was leading by a point with only four minutes left to be played and the Bulldogs managed to score the winning touchdown to edge the Eagles 26-20. Ray Bennett and Paul Spatz, outstanding linemen, and Tom Teller and Ralph Kendricks, fast moving backfield men, deserve much praise for their fine play. The forward pass play from Schacht to Fowler was also a good ground gainer.

They emulate the tried and proven warriors

The Blue-Gold Reserve squad experienced a fair season on the gridiron as the team managed to score only one victory. However, the boys gained much needed experience and will be qualified for future varsity football. Highlighting the reserve team were Ed Heekin, quarterback, and Jan Sharnhorst, halfback, while Gordon Marsh and John Krauser were key-men of the line. The remaining members of the squad must also be commended for their fair play and sportsmanship.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL, ROW 1: B. Phillips, R. Hamilton, J. Krug, P. Reichley, M. Rosenbaum, W. Thomas, H. Scott, J. Ritzi, K. Hamill, H. Johnson, D. Russin. ROW 2: E. Sharpe, D. Nevitt, S. Thomson, T. Nearly as much a part of any football or basketball game as the players themselves, are the cheerleaders. This high-spirited and enthusiastic group of amateur gymnasts is to be commended for an excellent job in keeping up the team morale and encouraging attendance at the games. They aroused enthusiasm in the students and confidence in the players through their wholehearted participation in pep rallies and that annual school tradition, "color day," on which everyone wears the school colors, blue and gold.

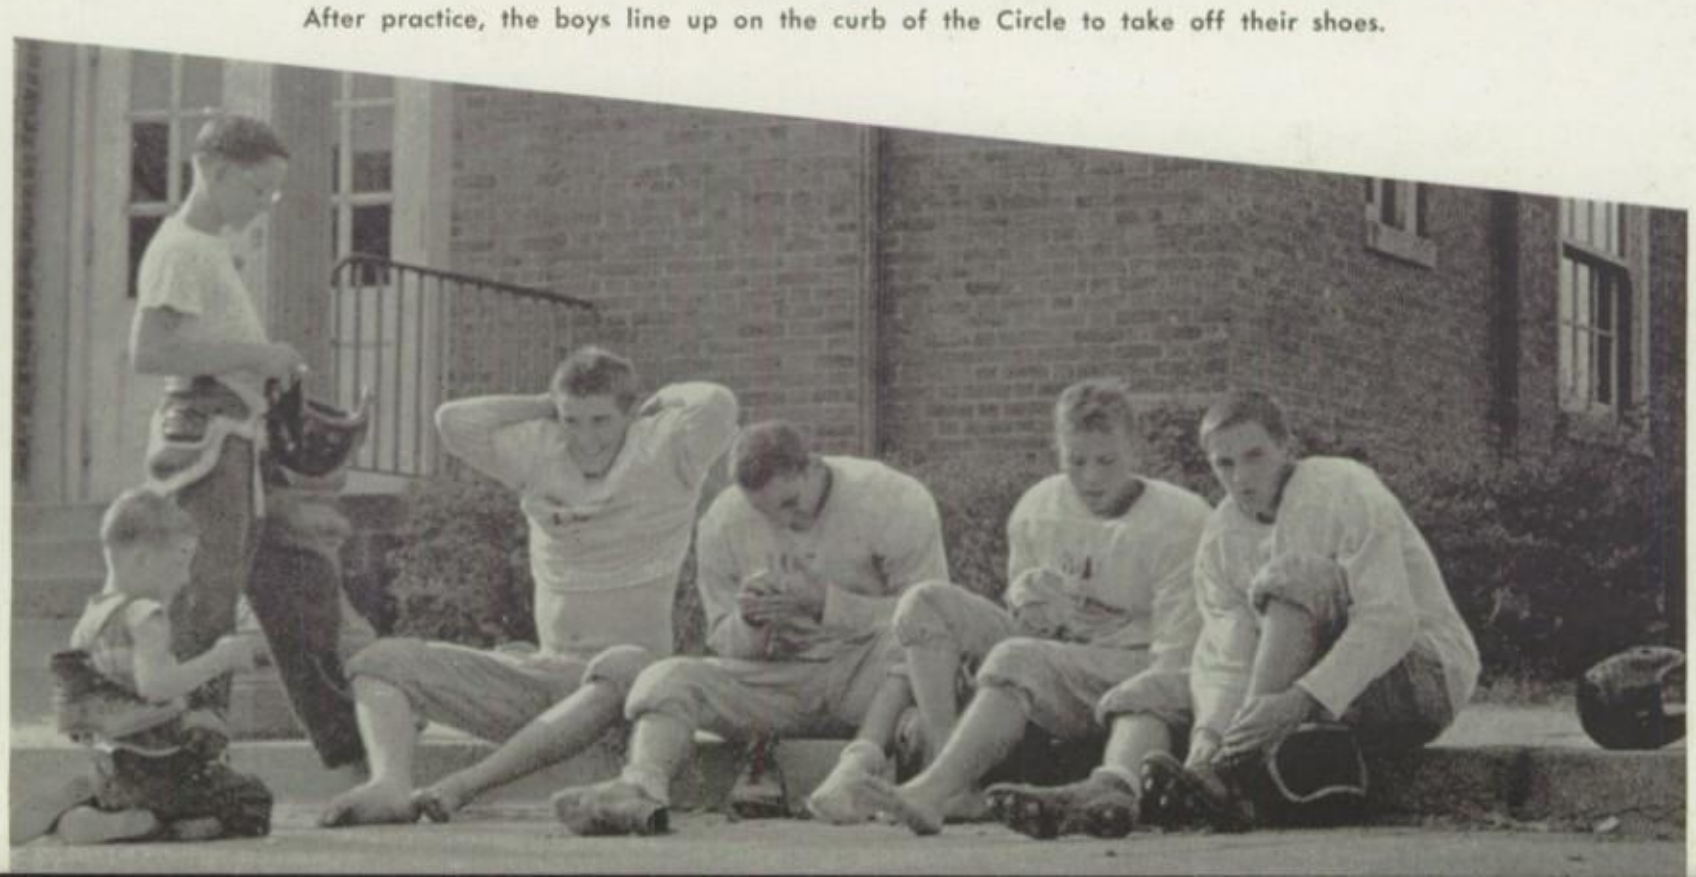
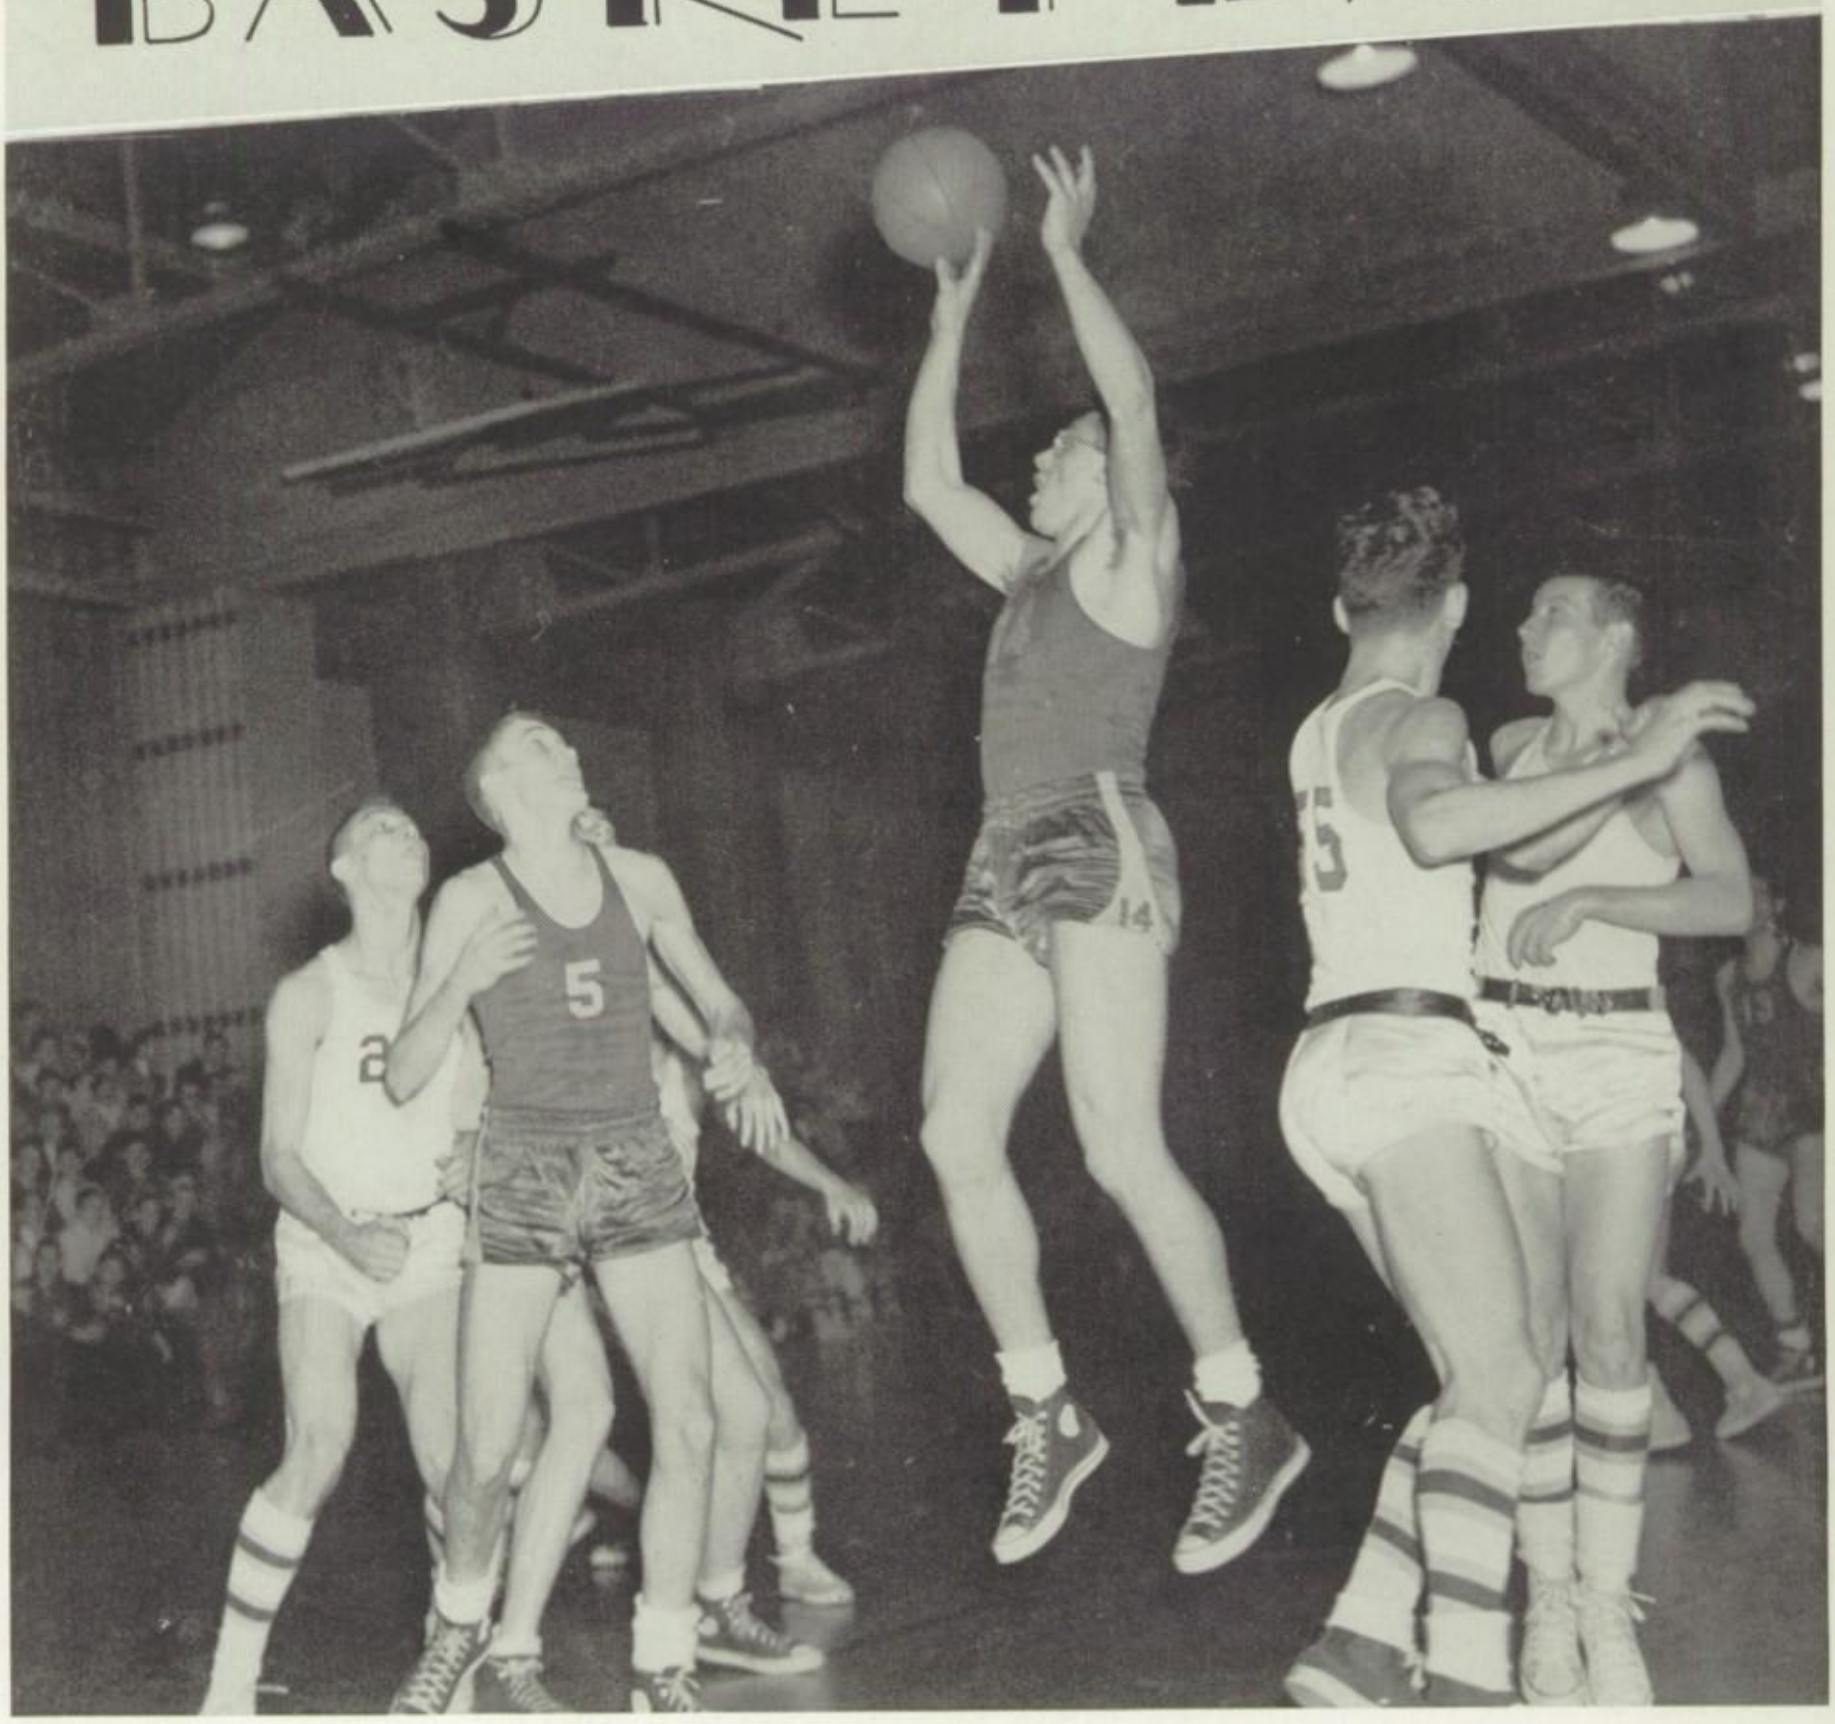
awaiting their friends' supporting cheers

Practice . . . the talk in the locker room, more chatter on the gym steps while putting of cleats, lying around on the field trying to conserve energy before calisthenics and scrimmage. Then work, hard calisthenics, ceaseless scrimmage, and wind sprints! Finally quitting time, more locker room chatter, relaxation in the showers, and starting home, buying something to eat on the way. And so into the week, practice . . . calisthentics, scrimmage, wind sprints, tiringly and endlessly. Then, the game! Getting game uniforms, joking with the coaches while taping ankles, last minute instructions and pep-talk, and then waiting. The long wait and bus ride to the game, and the game that is over too soon. Another long week of practice . . .

After practice, the boys line up on the curb of the Circle to take off their shoes.



BASKETBALL



Backed up by Sieber, Krieger takes a jump shot in the Withrow game.

On the basketball court, the Eagles witnessed a very difficult schedule and displayed fine team work and co-ordination against the top-notch squads. Opening the season against Portsmouth, rated very high in the state, the Blue-Gold team managed to edge out a victory in the closing seconds of the game on a field goal by Bob Felix, marking the first time they were defeated on their home court in five years. Advancing farther into the campaign, the Eagles began to click. As the Withrow game neared Coach Bass prophesied a win only to be disappointed very late in the final quarter when Dave Plunkett of Withrow dropped in a push-shot to bring a very close victory to the Tigers. During the entire season however, the Eagles were struggling desperately to maintain a high position in the PHSL standings and finally achieved their purpose by gaining a firm hold on third place led by West Hi and Withrow. The team was bolstered both by Mort Zeff and Bob Buss, high point men for the season and the entire squad should be commended for their efforts.

The Walnut Hills basketeers compiled an even slate for the 1951-52 season as the Blue-Gold cage men ended the campaign with ten wins and as many losses. The squad was handicapped by injuries with Mort Zeff and Sig Sieber, co-captains of the Eagle team, on the sidelines on and off throughout the season with minor ankle injuries. However, Bob Buss, outstanding forward, helped greatly to make up for these handicaps by playing sharp and steady basketball the entire campaign. Guards who deserve commending for their excellent sportsmanship and fine ball handling are Dick Puls and Jerry Kreiger who rounded out the starting quintet.

RESERVE BASKETBALL, ROW 1: A. Young, W. Coons, T. Rich, R. Dinerman, J. Ward. ROW 2: P. Cramer, M. Griffith, M. Schacht, F. Krimer, J. Shepherd.

This season the reserve basketball team got off to a good start, but slowed down to finish with an even average by winning as many games as they lost. A great loss was suffered after the first two games when Lou Spitz was moved up to the varsity squad. High point man Dave Buss, aided by Mike Schacht, Payton Cramer, and Terry Rich, bolstered the Eaglet scoring potential. The freshman team, aided by the outstanding playing of Pete Stockwell and Bob Hamilton, finished the season by breaking even in wins and losses.

See they run and leap with great perfection

In this, Coach "Tink" Scheurer's second year with the track team, the squad reflected his ability as a good mentor by taking first in several contests and holding their own in most others. In the first meet with Norwood the tracksters easily triumphed but went down before Central and Western the following week. In the next contest the team won over Central and Woodward, only to fall second to Hughes a week later. In the city meet, however, the Eagle runners finished last. Dick Puls, Bob Felix, John Phair, and Eric Foster, along with Dan Barrows and Virgil Nixon, are to be commended for their outstanding performance in helping the team on to victory.

On the other hand, the junior track team sparked by Ralph Kendricks, Charles Luebkeman, and Willie Bronson, faired even better by compiling three firsts and three seconds.

By triumphing at both the city and district meets the Walnut Hills varsity swimming team concluded a prosperous season with high anticipations for next year. The team started off at a somewhat slow pace bowing to Middletown and Withrow after downing Western Hills. However, all opponents were swept before them as the Blue-Gold swimmers secured the PHSL crown for the seventh time in eight years. Continuing their winning streak the Eagles went on to take the district championship for the third straight year. In the state meet our tankmen suffered their defeat of the season taking sixth place, while Canton McKinley took first for the second year. Outstanding swimmer for the season was captain John Phair, who, under the excellent and experienced coaching of "Whitey" Davis, set new city records in the 200 yard free style and the 150 yard individual medley, besides a new state record for the medley. Bill Richardson, Jerry Dolbey, George Wiley, and Sandy Silverman, in addition to Alan Oscherwitz, Bob Hunt, and Bob Huenefeld, were seven district lettermen who contributed to the victories and forecast a bright future for the swimming team.

they cleave the waters in joyous sport

The Eagle Junior Swimming team, following tradition swam to another victorious season. The hard-working junior mermen, sparked by the coaching of "Whitey" Davis, won their fourteenth straight City Championship. Outstanding performances by swimmers such as Jerry Dolbey, Bob Huenefeld, and Bob Hunt, who all placed in the district meet, enabled the team to down every opponent. The most spectacular junior swimmer was Jerry Dolbey, who took first place in the district meet and fourth in the State. Free-stylers Alan Oscherwitz and Stan Silverman also placed in the district meet.

The Walnut Hills baseball team worked hard on the diamond this year, but they were rewarded with few victories. However, a large crew of eager sophomores did gain valuable experience for the future. Harry Hannum coached the Eagle sluggers this year for the first time. The boys were ably led by co-captains Sig Sieber and Paul Dragul.

This year's tennis team upheld the Walnut Hills tradition of fine tennis which the school has maintained in the past decade, producing such outstanding sportsmen as Tony Trabert, John Rauh, Barrie Rich, John Bowling, and Don Brown. Going into the final weeks of the season, the team captained by Bob Buss, had won all but one of their matches, which was lost to Withrow. The golf team, coached for the first time by W. Raymond Farnham, went through a very active season. Led by the captain George Starr, the team challenged many schools in the greater Cincinnati area, and won a fair percentage of their matches.

GOLF TEAM, ROW 1: J. Dolbey, J. Henninger, C. Edwards. ROW 2: G. Starr, B. Kern. ROW 3: J. Morgan, J. Ziegler, S. Silverman, A. Cohen, J. Hobart.

The bonds of friendship find voice

GAA BOARD, ROW 1: J. Siphron, L. Janson, R. Harris, M. Toms. ROW 2. J. Jurgensen, J. M. White, P. Preston, J. Unger, A. Luther. ROW 3: T. Tallmadge, L. Freytag, C. Mayer, M. Magrish, J. Anderson.

The Girls' Athletic Association, with a membership of over fifty per cent of all the girls in Walnut Hills, is coordinated, advised, and directed by a group of sixteen girls, aided by their faculty sponsor, Miss Sellers. The GAA board is composed of the five officers and the heads of sports, who are selected each year by the retiring board. The girls meet on alternating Wednesdays to choose managers, plan the two seasonal banquets, and arrange other after-school sports activities. This year's calendar has been one of the most completely successful schedules for GAA. Two of the highlights were the initiation of bowling and the ice-skating party.

EMBLEM WINNERS, ROW 1: M. Ingram, V. Bidlingmeyer, E. Lee, C. Mayer, M. Franz. ROW 2: A. Ehrenfeld, J. Bufe, J. Unger, S. Sonneman, A. Luther, L. Janson, M. Lyons. ROW 3: M. Magrish, C. Lieder, J. Siphron, P. Preston, P. Day. ROW 4: L. Roll, C. Ross, J. Simon, E. Ronshiem, J. Jurgensen, N. Schmidt, J. Oettinger, J. Lea.

INTRAMURAL HOCKEY TEAM, ROW 1: J. Williams, S. Hattendorf, C. Bockhorst, J. Lea, J. Kursban, M. Ledford, J. Knoop, J. Kindel, N. Condon, N. Stingly, M. Brown, E. Silversteen, L. Stern.

UPPER SCHOOL HOCKEY TEAM, ROW 1: J. Simon, S. Lambkin, J. Lea, Y. Herring. ROW 2: L. Roll, M. Lyons, C. Braun, M. Gusweiler, C. Ross, N. Schmidt, E. Parris.

In the fall the major upper school sport is hockey. Cold noses, happy hearts, bruised shins, and flying mud are all remembrances of a wonderful season which ended in a Sophomore victory. The lower school girls, playing on Mondays and Wednesdays, devoted the fall to soccer, which prepares them for hockey and also develops skill, sportsmanship, and a love for outdoor sports. In these sports and in practices, the girls are divided into intramural squads which compete in a tournament. The players with the most ability participate on the class teams.

Volleyball, the sport of late fall and early winter, develops the essential spirit of team work. Although the "Rotation Blues" was the theme song of this sport, nevertheless, at the closing of the season, everyone finally figured out where she belonged, especially the seniors, who were the class team champions. In the exciting lower school contest, the eighth grade team was victorious.

Senior girls try to connect with the elusive volleyball.

Changing are the patterns of the game

UPPER SCHOOL VOLLEYBALL TEAM, ROW 1: J. Jurgensen, M. Harrison, M. A. Rollins, H. Clark, R. McElroy. ROW 2: E. Thomas, L. Janson, A. Luther, C. Forney, J. Unger, E. Benner.

and the fluid rhythms of the dance

Every Wednesday the members of Dance club meet and practice new techniques of modern interpretive dancing. The intra-city symposium highlighted the club's activities. Miss Hutchinson is the skillfull and talented director. Basketball brightens the gloomy winter months of most girls. The eighth graders were champs in this sport also.

DANCE CLUB, ROW 1: E. Brown, E. Harris, R. Montgomery. ROW 2: S. Oscherwitz, B. Ewald, B. McCarty, N. Condon.

UPPER SCHOOL BASKETBALL TEAM, ROW 1: M. Sturgeon, S. Howard, V. Bidlingmeyer, M. Marc, R. Monjar. ROW 2: N. Toennies, J. Spinanger, B. Rhoades, D. Cottrell.

In swift, deft strokes is inner vitality,

HONOR SWIMMING TEAM, ROW 1: M. Moore, P. Preston, S. Hattendorf, M. H. Dieckman. ROW 2: E. Paradise, S. Anderson, C. Mayer, B. Soulas. ROW 3: B. Lepsky, T. Eggenberger, A. Ehrenfeld, M. Cooper, M. Gusweiler.

LOWER SCHOOL SWIMMING, ROW 1: S. Martin, B. Schott, J. Goodman, M. Huss. ROW 2: V. Frank, S. Watt, T. Tallmadge, J. Atkinson, D. Spellman.

"Sursum ad summum" is the motto of the honor swimming team. Under the able coaching of Mrs. Marian Wright, and after patient practicing for perfection, the Walnut Hills mermaids came in first in the city meet. At the splash party in December, the GAA swimmers greatly enjoyed themselves. The girls earned points both by taking three GAA swimming tests and the master test, the highest achievement.

Advertising . . . A tale of the bond

"There was once a certain peddler in Bagdad," said Shaherazad, "who felt a great jealousy of a successful rug merchant dwelling nearby. Thinking to reduce this man to poverty, the peddler spread rumors that the merchant's wares were woven with the aid of evil powers. The sagacious dealer on hearing this, immediately displayed a sign saying "Rare magically made rugs for sale." Curiosity brought many people to the shop and the merchant prospered greatly." Although the peddlers whispering campaign backfired, this small tale shows the value of well used advertising. Today both manufacturer and consumer depend on ads to transact business. Advertising also furnishes a large part of the capital for papers and magazines, not to mention year books. We beg the reader's attention for the stores and factories which help to support our annual.
